TURNPIKE CONDEMNED

Traveling Public Relieved From Paying Toll on Pike From

HUMES MILL TO LEMONT

The Case was Tried in the Court House During Thursday and Friday of Last Week.

THE PIKE TO THE GAP IS SPLENDID

An interesting case was on trial in the Court Room during Thursday and Friday of last week involving the question of the condemnation of the turnpike extending from Humes Mill to Lemont. This road is commonly known as the Bellefonte and Boalsburg turnpike. About seventeen years ago this portion of the pike extending from Lemont to Boalsburg was condemned and declared a public road free from toll and toll-gates. Recently a petition was circulated and signed by two hundred and twelve citizens of Centre County asking that the balance of the road, about six miles be condemned. Upon the presentation of the petition the Court appointed John A. Woodward, John Holmes, Solomon Peck, William Pealer and Henry Meyer as viewers, or Jurors, with J. C. Meyer as master to hear the case and take such action as to their judgment would be for the best interests of the tax-payers and citizens of the Court. Fortney & Fortney, represented the petitioners, Gettig, Bower and Zerby looked after the interest of the County. John Blanchard Esq., represented the turnpike corporation, and Clement Dale, Esq., opposed the condemnation on behalf of the township but more particularly College township, arguing that it would cost an undue burden on the municipal corporation in compelling them to repair and maintain the turnpike. After the arguments were over the jurors retired and agreed upon the following verdict: that the turnpike be condemned and declared free from toll and toll-gates and that they further assess the damages at the sum of three hundred and fifty dollars. This means that there will be no more toll collected from the travelling public on this road and that the turnpike company will receive three hundred and fifty dollars for the pike. Unless the turnpike company takes an appeal or file exceptions to the report of viewers this will end the case.

License Court

Under the new rules of court adopted about a year ago license court for 1908 will be held Saturday, December 14th, 1907, instead of the first Tuesday in March as heretofore. This is for the purpose of giving the court ample time to consider all applications judiciously and dispose of them long before April 1, 1908, the beginning of the license year. The advantage in this lies in the fact that if for any reason a preent holder of license should be refused, or a new applicant granted, it would give the one ample time to dispose of his place and stock and the other to make all arrangements necessary for start in business. And as license court will be held on December 14th, all applications must be filed on or before Friday, November 22nd. Hotel keepers throughout the county want to bear this fact in mind, or they will be minus a license next year.

Death of George B. Bruss.

George B. Burss, who had been afflicted with inflammation of the brain for the past six weeks, died at 5.35 o'clock Sunday at his home on Oak street East Tyrone. He had been in a comatose condition for several weeks preceding his death.

Aged 45 years, 10 months and 12 days he was born January 5th 1862, in Penn's valley, Centre county. He had resided here for the past eight years. The deceased is survived by his wife, Mrs. Margaret Bruss, and the following sons and daughter: Mrs. Georgiana Light, Mrs. Lulu Campbell, Budd, Ellis, Lena, Gilbert and Goldie. He also leaves one sister Mrs. Ellen Swisher of Julian, and one brother, William Bruss, of Unionville.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. C. W. Karns, at the late home of the deceased at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Interment in Tyrone cemetery.

THE BOROUGH LEGISLATORS.

Held Semi-Monthly Meeting on Monday Evening.

The regular semi-monthly session of the Borough Council was held on Monday evening with the following members present: President Keller, Shuey, Wagner, Beezer, Brown, Hamilton.

The meetings of the previous meeting were read and approved after which council proceeded to discuss the business before them.

Nothing of importance was elicited from the reports of the various committees.

The Solicitor reported that there was a case stated against Robert Karstetter and Samuel Cole, butchers at Pleasant Gap for violation of the market ordinance.

A nuisance was reported in the rear of the Daniel Garman property. It was the throwing of stale fruit and other stuff in the rear of Thal's grocery.

The new building being erected over the race by John Dubbs was under consideration and a resolution was passed requesting him to put a fire proof roof on the building.

The Street committee reported against the crossing over South Water street which asked for at the last meeting by P. F. Keichline.

The fast running of automobiles in the boro was complained of and the police are instructed to warn auto drivers exceeding the speed limit in the boro and if their warning is not heeded to arrest the violators. The speed limit in the boro is 10 miles an hour, and in the country 20 miles an hour.

The following bills were approved and orders drawn.

Third Regiment Winner.

Harrisburg, Nov. 16.—With a general average of 95.07 out of a possible 100, the Third regiment carries off first honors among the infantry organization at the latest annual inspection of the National Guard of Pennsylvania. The First and Second Philadelphia city troops lead the calvary with a general average of 96.54 each and Battery C leads the artillery wite a general average of 94.19, the rating of Battery B being 93.91.

The First regiment takes second honors among the infantry organizations with a general average of 94.46 and the Eighth regiment carries off third honors with a rating of 94.20. The ratings of the other infantry organizations are as follows: Second regiment, 89.84; Fourth regiment 91.48; Sixth regiment, 91.04; Ninth regiment, 91.48; Sixteenth regiment, 92.67 and Eighteenth regiment, 93.43.

Rain and muddy parade grounds prevented the Fifth and Tenth regiments from drilling at the annual inspections, which were held during the brigade encampments last July, and the general average of neither is given. Troop A, Philadelphia, is given a general average of 95.18; Governor's Troop, Harrisburg, 95.63; Troop F, New Castle, 85.90, and Sheridan Troop, Tyrone 95.36.

The details of these inspections were announced in a general order, issued from the headquarters of the guard today, in which Gov. Stuart commends "the efforts of all to advance the military institution of the commonwealth in efficiency, dignity and importance." The governor also says it is important that the national guard of this state be maintained at all times in the highest possible state of efficiency.

Col. Frank G. Sweeny, inspector general of the guard, pays a high compliment to the troops. He explains that the inspector general and other inspection officers saw the troops only when they were on "parade."

"If the personal appearance, military bearing and work performed at the inspection," adds Col. Sweeney, "are to be accepted as conclusive evidence of efficiency, then the division has never been in better form. The general condition of the several organizations at the ceremony of inspection, making due allowance for wet weather and attended unfavorable circumstances, was high commendable. Some of the commands inspected in the rain evidenced, by their neatness and soldiererly bearing a high order of discipline."

The Sixty First Teachers' Institute.

Now In Session In The Court House--The Attendance Is Very Large. The Instructors are the Best that could be secured.

THE GYPSY CONCERT THURSDAY NIGHT

"Reported by C. H. Dickerman."

The sixty-first teachers' institute of Centre Co. opened its sessions Monday afternoon at two, with prayer by the Rev. F. W. Barry of the Lutheran church, Bellefonte. The audience were then led in the singing of several well known songs by Prof. Philip Meyer, of Centre Hall, Miss Bessie H. Dorworth at the piano.

Dr. Chas. C. Miller, of Lima (O.) College, was the first speaker of the season, gave a talk on "This Busy World of Ours," in which he pointed out to all teachers the importance of following closely the course of current events.

Dr. Miller pointed out the main events, or "hill tops" as he called them, prominent in a retrospect of the last year. Such topics, he said, should be noted by every teacher, and some of them surely presented to the class in detail, as the case may require. In the list of such important events Dr. Miller mentioned the following:

1. The admission of Oklahoma to the Union, bringing with it an important and novel constitution, the "Constitution of Reform." This document is said to touch on almost all governmental reforms known in history.

2. The new speed records in oceanic transportation made by the Lusitania, and expected from the Mauretania, thus more than realizing, taken together with the new "Cape to Cairo" R. R. Jules Verne's dream of "Around the World in 80 Days."

3. The death of Richard Mansfield, America's leading histrionic artist.

4. The discovery of the world's largest diamond, in the South African fields.

5. President Roosevelt's action in erasing the motto "In God we Trust" from the coins.

6. The present financial crisis; its actual meaning and probable result.

Dr. J. C. Willis, of the University of Louisville, Ky., gave a talk on "Educational Psychology," which was, unfortunately, curtailed by the time limit.

"If I could wish for you all a good wish," Dr. Willis began," it is that you should be well as long as you live, and when you die, that you should go quickly." The only way, continued the speaker, in which we can attain to our maximum productiveness, and at the same time keep our cheerfulness, is to keep physically sound.

In these days we grow old far too quickly. By 40 we are past our prime, by 60 white bearded old men, and by 80 palsied and altogether out of the race. This is certainly due to the premature development of [illegible]

This age is called the "Age of the Young Man," the more the pity! The years we should devote to training are now crammed with active service, as a consequence the order of a man's work is lower, and the individual sinks into premature decay. More than the vigor and activity of the young man, our country needs today the balanced maturity of middle age.

In order to arrive at perfect development we must devote the time which nature allots to the unfolding of each period of the child's life. To have a boyhood we must have had an infancy, to have a manhood we must have had a boyhood, before noonday must come dawn.

TUESDAY MORNING.

Institute opened Tuesday morning with prayer by the Rev. Barshinger of the United Brethren church, Bellefonte. After the usual singing Mr. Wagner of the Bellefonte High School, gave the report of the Reading Committee for the present year.

Dr. J. C. Willis gave the first address, taking for his subject "Psychopathia and Neurology." In lay language, his subject was: What conditions result from unhealthy nerves and brain, and how the nervous system may be kept healthy.

All eccentricities of personal behavior, abnormalities of conduct and insanity itself result, said the Doctor, from abnormal or diseased nerve condition. Affections like nerve prostration (our national disease), Hysteria and Epilepsy are all due to nerve disturbance.

What are the causes of these conditions? Very often the rapid pace of our modern life, either social or scientific. The society woman and the "college grind" alike suffer first prostration then general breakdown, and lastly dementia and perhaps paresis.

How may these conditions be overcome? If already existing, a complete change in one's scheme of life may effect partial recovery, or complete cure. But they should never be allowed to exist. By taking proper food, and abstaining from improper (this is simply done); by devoting ⅓ of our time each day to work, ⅓ to recreation, ⅓ to sleep, we may always have "good nerves" and be able to accomplish regular vigrous, and natural work.

Dr. C. H. Gordinier, Dean of Kee Marr College, Hagerstown, Md., gave the second tolk of the morning. He took for his subject "The Art of Questioning." "Any fool can ask a question" says the old adage; perhaps however this is only half true. Questioning is under many circumstances an art, and a most necessary one for the teacher to become proficient in. Teachers, however, are not the best questioners; these are the lawyers. Every lawyer knows he must take care with his questions, for he has a mature audience to criticise, and a daily press to reprint and discuss all he may say. The teacher on the other hand, has few or no critics. At best they are immature, and little given to criticism of the pedagogical details of his work. Nevertheless careful questioning will be of the greatest value to the teacher.

Questioning to teach goes back at least to Socrates. His method, the Socratic, is still the most valuable in the school room and deserves a little study. This method may be divided into two parts:

(a) Questioning information in.

(b) Questioning knowledge out.

The first of these methods, questioning to instil information, is of the utmost value in pedagogy. Its value is explained by relating it to the Herbartian Law, to develop information by adding the unknown to the known. Thus in Mensuration we might naturally develop one problem out of the foregoing by questioning a pupil at the board, aiming to impress on him how the properties of one figure are proved by those of a related figure.

We might state the following as a good principle in the art of questioning. Questions are valuable in proportion as the arouse mental effort.

Following out this principle we may formulate several specific rules:

1. Let the question elicit, and not give, most of the information required.

2. Avoid questions that can be answered without mental effort, such as, for instance, "Who discovered America?"

3. Avoid questions in which, if the answer given is wrong, only the alternative remains. For instance: "Is a noun plural?" No. Then is must be singular.

4. Avoid questions in the "Yankee style;" answering the question first, then answering it.

5. Last of all avoid the indefinite question, that can be answered in many different ways.

During the intermission the audience was entertained by two exceedingly clever negro recitations, rendered by Miss Betty Heinle, of Bellefonte. Miss Heinle possesses a remarkable mastery of dramatic expression, and a control and modulation of the voice that is as charming as it is unusual.

Dr. Chas. C. Miller, whose lecture on Alexander Hamilton was enjoyed by so many Monday evening, gave the last address on "South America, the land of the 20th Century."

Dr. Miller emphasized the wealth of the southern continent, and its rapidly increasing industrial activity. He outlined its history, from the time of the Spanish conquest of the Incas, through the patriotic revolutions led by San Martin and Bolivar, down to the present time, a reminiscence of industrial national life.

Dr. Miller prophisied that South America would soon become a dangerous rival of our own country, both in the hide business, in which Argentina now is prominent and in the flour trade, in which this same republic, the garden spot of the continent, threatens to out-rival the world.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON.

The first address of the afternoon was made by Dr. Gardinier, on "The Rule of Three." In choosing his title, the speaker said, he did not have in mind the old rule in our grandfathers' arithmetics, but a new rule of three applicable to the business of teaching—in fact, a Teachers' Creed. This creed is simple, containing but three articles:

I. Faith. I have faith in the child, and to show that faith I will be obedient to the laws which govern my relationship toward him. This article the speaker explained by the object lesson of a nut. The nut contains a rich sweet kernel (at least you have faith it does,) yet you bite it between your teeth, and find it hard and unestable. How are you to prove your faith? You may either smash it with a heavy blow, and see what is inside at once; but—then you destroy its value. On the other hand you may carefully study how to open the nut without injury to the kernel within; then open it, and eat. So with the child. Avoid harsh and hasty punishment. Study the child. Then, chiefest of all, try to get at the good within.

II Hope. I will look on the bright side, and hope for the best. Be an optimist. Bring sunshine into the schoolroom, where sunshine is most needed.

Hope is desire plus expectation. Desire the best, and expect it. You will get it.

III Charity. For the frailties of others I will endeavor to manifest the same charity I would ask for myself.

Dr. Miller spoke on "The Great Well Springs of English." He said that there had been, through the whole course of English Literature, a few prominent writers who had formed and determined our English tongue; being as the poet has it, "Wells of English undefiled." The speaker wished to indicate the more prominent, as follows:

Chaucer—who first fixed his dialect as standard literary English, and made the literature of his time overflowing with foreign beauties and natural life.

John Wycliffe, whose translation of the Latin Bible into clear virile Saxon gave to the people a literary masterpiece in their own tongue.

Roger Aschum—schoolmaster and tutor to Queen Elizabeth, who changed the language of the English Bench from learned Latin to the vernacular.

Edmund Spenser—"The poet's poet," whose famous line is the great model for English versification.

Shakespeare,—whose work is too vast and far reaching to need illustration.

Milton,—Scarcely less great than Shakespear, who added classical grace, dignity, and charm to our speech.

Dr. Willis spoke on the "Bacteria of Common Diseases." He described what we call the "germ," differentiated the harmless, and discussed the prevention of infection.

The Doctor made two important points; first, that the body in a healthy state will destroy or reject injurious bacteria; second, that by proper care we can keep the majority of germs out of our system.

We should guard especially against tuberculosis and typhoid, two germ diseases terribly prevalent in our lititudes. To do this we must have pure air, pure food, pure water. To get pure air we should keep our houses well aired and sunned, and our city streets clean. To obtain pure water we should take the utmost care of our water supply, boiling our drinking water, if necessary. We are, it seems, on a fair way towards getting pure food, with our government inspection lately established, and popular attention (the most important thing) aroused.

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

Institute opened Wednesday morning with prayer by the Rev. A. M. Schmidt of the Reformed church. The first address of the morning was made by Dr. Willis on "Personal and Public Hygienes." Our health, said the Doctor, is almost entirely in our own hands. Not the least important branch of this subject is the sanitary inspection of our schools.

Take the problem of lighting. Light ought to be from that side of the building away from the sun; the sun's direct rays being too strong for any eye.

Secondly, the eye should be given rest, but allowing it to look at one of nature's pure colors,—blue, gray, or brown. In these colors the walls should be tinted.

Scarcely any two persons have eyeballs alike. Most of us suffer from the exhaustion of excessive light. Most of us ought to work with glasses properly to aid our sight. The vision of pupils should be made a matter of inspection.

Other things beside vision require attention, coughs and catarrh unfit the child temporarily for study, tonsilitius and other adventitious growths in nose and throat are more serious and should have the care of the school physician.

To prevent infections the ventilations and water supply of a school should be likewise overhauled by a physician.

Everyteacher should know how to keep a building chemically clean, to disinfect. He should insist on uncarpeted floor, to be washed with disinfecting soap. A teacher should know how to fumigate. Solphur will do, or formaldehyde. Floor, windows, and desks should now and then be washed with a weak carbolic solituon.

The fouling of the air by the breath should receive most attention. Sunlight, heat and fresh air, are almost all that is necessary. Ventilation should be managed without draughts. The temperature should be about 65, the air kept a bit moist. Most of us keep the air too warm.

In the intermission following Dr. Willis' address Miss Heinle recited "Life's a Very Funny Proposition After All," accompanied by Miss Dorworth at the piano. This was received with hearty applause and an encore "After the Cows Come Home."

THE LION—THE MOUSE.

Tuesday night a large and enthusiastic Bellefonte audience was entertained by Mr. Edward Elliott's capable presentation of the story of "The Lion and the Mouse," the well known social drama of Charles Kline. It seemed remarkable that one speaker, with a task before him comprising not only the narrative of a plot, but continual dramatic impersonation of two, three or four characters, could so well hold an audience for two steady hours.

Mr. Elliott was more than equal to his task. He was perfectly prepared, went at his work with vigor and enthusiasm, and "neither stuttered, coughed, sneezed nor apologized." Mr. Elliott moreover drove home the lesson of the play in an earnest manner,—the lesson of the power and the danger of great riches.

Mr. Elliott was perhaps most successful in his impersonation of the money king, John Ryder. The audience delighted in his variety of facial expression, ranging from the irresistably comic to the pathos of real tragedy. His voice also was all that could be desired.

As a man Mr. Elliott looks the typical actor. He has the facial gesture, the carrying voice, and the easy carriage of the stage. He wears the Richard Mansfield monocle.—C. H. Dickerman.

A New "Auto" in Town.

It seem as though that old stork travels around any old hour during the night. Friday evening some time after ten o'clock it flew into Dutch Otto's home on Allegheny street and left a big baby boy. Happy—guess Dutch is, why shouldn't he be, now he has a boy and a girl. By the time this young man is as old as the girl Dutch won't have any hair on the top of his head. Fifteen or twenty years hence we see Dutch standing along the side line witnessing a base ball or foot ball game in which his Dutch Jr. is the star actor. And then we can see this same young man teaching the other fellows how to dance. If this young dutchman will turn out to be the all around athlete and business man that his father is, he will be a credit to the town.

Fire at Milesburg.

Tuesday evening a coal oil lamp exploded in one of the bedrooms at the residence of C. H. Else, the druggist, in Milesburg. Mrs. C. L. Green, of Cincinnati, O., who is a guest in the home, tried to smother the fire with a comfort which soon became saturated with the oil. The lady's dress then took fire and she was badly burned about the hands and arms. The flames were fortunately confined to one room.

Old Home Week.

By LULU JOHNSON.

Copyrighted, 1907, by M. M. Cunningham.

Billy Sugden read the pamphlet through from cover to cover, from the first glaring line, "Old Home Week," to the imprint of the "Blairsville Mercury Job Print" on the last page of the cover. Somehow the little booklet seemed to have almost the value of a message from home. He could even tell which part of the text Carr, the editor of the Mercury, had written and which portions were the product of the Rev. John Dudley, the Presbyterian minister, who has literary aspirations.

One paragraph in particular appealed to him. It ran, "We have set a date later than most of the old home weeks so that as we, the home stayers, bring to a happy and prosperous conclusion the harvest of the year so may the homecomers bring with them the first fruits of their prosperity and their talent."

Whoever had sent him the pamphlet had underscored this paragraph, and Sugden felt with a glow of pride that his new found fame had reached even to the old home. It was only in the last few months that he had gained the position as an illustrator for which he had fought, and fame was still very sweet to him. He could see visions of the old home, the quiet, shady streets, the trees now gorgeous in their autumnal tints, as he sat down and wrote a note of regret to the famous lion hunter who had sought to add him to her collection at Newport for that week.

As the train drew near the old town some weeks later he peered from the windows as eagerly as a boy.

On both sides of the car excited faces were pressed against the glass locating familiar spots, and when at last the long line of cars swung around the point and the gray old breakwater came into sight the car rang with cheers, in which Sugden's voice was by no means the least vociferous.

It was pleasant to meet the reception committee with their pompous formality of welcoming speeches, which were followed by the more genuine handclasps. It was still more pleasant to make his way up the street and get a welcome on every hand, but through it all Sugden was conscious of one lack—the absence of one person who alone could make old home week a success to him. For the first time he realized that the week meant to him Elizabeth Grantley, and it was to see her that he had come.

As he crossed the foaming little river that cut the town in two he remembered the last time that he stood on the span. He and Elizabeth had leaned against the rail, watching the swirling waters in the uncertain moonlight, while gently she had put from her the hopes that had risen in her breast and had sent him on his way unfettered by matrimonial promises. "If you really want me you will come back for me without a promise," she had whispered. "I could not bear to think that I was holding you back in your career, Billy." He had protested and argued, but the girl had steadfastly held to her point. She would not marry him—she would not even consider an engagement. If he was to fight his way in the world he must be left free.

He had failed then to perceive her point of view. He had wanted her to marry him and go with him in search of a career. When she had refused he had flung himself away, and he had not written. Now he knew that she had been right, and he longed to tell her so. "There was a bureau of information through which visitors might locate their old friends, but the sweet faced girl in charge of the registry list shook her head regretfully. We tried to locate the Grantleys to reach them with an announcement," she explained, "but they appear to have dropped from sight completely. I will make a note of your address in case we do locate them." Sugden thanked her and went out feeling as though after all his coming had been a mistake. He slipped into the opera house to listen for awhile to the formal exercises for the opening day, but he found the prosy oratory tiresome and soon sought the open air. Bridge and Court streets were brought out brilliantly by arches of incandescent lights, and in the Indian summer warmth a pushing, perspiring crowd made their way up and down the streets and jostled each other into the gutter, while the confetti was scattered about and the feather ticklers were everywhere in evidence.

With a gesture of disgust, Sugden turned from the crowd. His mood was not atune to merrymaking, and he sought the more quiet parts of the town. Almost unconsciously he took the familiar paths that led to the little cottage where the Grantleys had made their home, and presently he found himself leaning against the fence that inclosed the well kept garden. Here he lighted a cigar, and with the soft gloom of the tree shaded yard for his screen he projected from his fancy scenes wherein he and Elizabeth had figured. He could see the gay hammock swung between the apple tree and the horse chestnut. He could picture the dainty figure in filmy white and could almost hear her hail of "I'm out here, Billy, in the hammock," as the gate clicked behind him.

Then his mind conjured the vision of the wistful faced girl leaning upon the railing of the bridge and pleading with him to keep his freedom that he might make his fight free handed. He remembered those last few moments when he had declared that he would have nothing more to do with a girl who feared to face poverty with him, and even now it seemed that he could hear her sobs as she had walked with tear blinded eyes down the street, while he had leaned against the wall and had watched her go without a single word of comfort.

Somehow the sobbing seemed strangely real. It was almost as though a woman there in the shadow of the trees was letting loose the flood gates of her grief. So real did the sound seem that he flung away his cigar and vaulted the low fence, making for the direction of the sound. But, though he expected to find a woman there under the trees, it was with a shock that he did come face to face with a bowed figure. With uplifted hat and a murmured offer of service, he advanced, but the woman moved away silently. Something in the poise brought Sugden's heart into his mouth, and, with a cry, he darted forward.

"Elizabeth! Is it really you?" he demanded. "Have I found you at last?" The girl was at the gate now, and in the light of the distant street lamp he saw that he was right.

"Listen, dear," he went on. "I don't blame you for wanting nothing to do with me, but hear me only for a minute.

"I did not know what you intuitively guessed—how hard the struggle would be. I did not know the conditions. I thought that with you to help me make the fight I could do better. I know now that I was wrong."

"I thought that knowledge would come in time," said the girl softly. "Genius in a garret is a thing of the past. Genius to be discovered must live and dress well. I could not make you understand that."

"But I know it now," he assured her. "I can see that alone I could live better and at least preserve the appearance of prosperity that was my greatest aid to advancement. And even as my error was great so is my penitence, Betty. Can you find it in your heart to forgive me, to admit me at least to your friendship?"

"To forgive is part of woman's life," she said wearily. "I had not intended to make myself known. I just wanted to see the old town and the old home again, but you have found me out."

"And this time I shall not let you go," he said, "not if I can prove how great has been my repentance. Look, dear, the old house is for sale. May I buy it in the hope that some day we shall call it home? I know I do not deserve forgiveness, dear, but—you said I would find you waiting when I came home."

"It has been a long wait," she said softly, "a very long wait, Billy, but I have kept my promise. I have waited alone."

Gently, almost reverently, he took her in his arms, and as his lips brushed the soft brown hair he realized what some men never come to know, the depth and beauty of a woman's loving forgiveness. Sugden had found the old home—and the new.

Taking No Chances.

"It is a rule to which good lawyers usually adhere," says a Philadelphia attorney, "never to tell more than one knows. There was an instance in England not many years ago wherein a lawyer carried the rule to the extreme.

"One of the agents in a Midland revision court objected to a person whose name was on the register on the ground that he was dead. The revision attorney declined to accept the assurance, however, and demanded conclusive testimony on the point.

"The agent on the other side arose and gave corroborative evidence as to the decease of the man in question.

"'But, sir, how do you know the man's dead?' demanded the barrister.

"'Well,' was the reply, 'I don't know. It's very difficult to prove.'

"'As I suspected,' returned the barrister. 'You don't know whether he's dead or not.'

"Whereupon the witness coolly continued: 'I was saying, sir, that I don't know whether he is dead or not, but I do know this: They buried him about a month ago on suspicion.'"—Harper's Weekly.

3 TRAINMEN INJURED

But None of Them Seriously in Montandon Wreck

EXTENT OF DAMAGE

All of the Men are Williamsporters and were Able to Return to Their Home at Williamsport

BRAKEMAN RESPONSIBLE FOR WRECK

Three Williamsport railroaders were injured on the Pennsylvania railroad in a wreck that followed a head-on collision at Montandon Friday about 4:30 a. m., fast freight, west-bound, and extra freight No. 3117, east-bound, running together. The wreck was caused by a misplaced switch. The injured men are Engineer Harry C. Stoll, of 734 West Edwin street; Fireman Frank R. Bell, of 152 Academy street, and Brakeman T. C. Hill, of 417 Allen street.

Stull was burned about the head and his left shoulder, left hip and right knee were injured. Hill's face was scorched and he had a few bruises about the head. He was thrown from the cab window when the collision occurred, just as he was in the act of calling to the engineer that a collision was about to occur. He rolled on the ground to extinguish a fire that had started to consume his clothing. Bell had a thrilling experience, being pinned under the engine where hot coals were falling from the firebox. The engine took a second lurch and he was freed. His face was scorched and bruised and his left arm and right leg were sprained. All of the injured men chose to return to their homes here rather than go to a hospital, although a special train was dispatched to carry them to a hospital.

It is stated that a brakeman of the east-bound train threw across over to the west-bound instead of to the east-bound track, this being responsible for the wreck. The engine and tender got upon the west-bound track just as the fast freight struck it. Both engines were thrown on their sides in a ditch and ten cars were in the pile-up. It was not until after 10 o'clock that one of the blockaded tracks was opened so that traffic could be resumed. All morning trains from the east were delayed by the wreck.

A Burning Question.

The local option strength in the state has become too formidable to be jogaled with longer. Two legislatures have now refused to face the question. It is up to the next one to redeem the record of its predecessors, or else invite a political revolution through the state that will not only demoralize the liquor trade but dethrone the politicians who have refused to trust the people to determine the status of the saloon in their several localities.

That the question of local option is to be a dominant issue in Pennsylvania during the next two years is not seriously doubted by anyone. The growing interest in the question throughout the country, and especially in the South, reinforced by the aggressive efforts that have been made in this state by the local option people during the past two years and more, have all conspired to make prominent this issue in Pennsylvania.

A Lazy Liver

May be only a tired liver, or a starved liver. It would be a stupid as well as savage thing to beat a weary or starved man because he lagged in his work. So in treating the lagging, torpid liver it is a great mistake to lash it with strong drastic drugs. A torpid liver is but an indication of an ill-nourished, enfeebled body whose organs are weary with over work. Start with the stomach and allied organs of digestion and nutrition. Put them in working order and see how quickly your liver will become active. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has made many marvelous cures of "liver trouble", by its wonderful control of the organs of digestion and nutrition. It restores the normal activity of the stomach, increases the secretions of the blood-making glands, cleanses the system from poisonous accumulations, and so relieves the liver of the burdens imposed upon it by the defection of other organs.

If you have bitter or bad taste in the morning, poor or variable appetite, coated tongue, foul breath, constipated or irregular bowels, feel weak, easily tired, despondent, frequent headaches, pain or distress in "small of back," gnawing or distressed feeling in stomach, perhaps nausea, "liver" or sour "risings" in throat after eating, and kindred symptoms of weak stomach and torpid liver, no medicine will relieve you more promptly or cure you more permanently than Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Perhaps only a part of the above symptoms will be present at one time and yet point to torpid liver or biliousness and weak stomach. Avoid all hot bread and biscuits, griddle cakes and other indigestible food and take the "Golden Medical Discovery" regularly and stick to its use until you are vigorous and strong.

The "Discovery" is non-secret, non-alcoholic, is a glyceric extract of native medicinal roots with a full list of its ingredients printed on each bottle-wrapper and attested under oath. Its ingredients are endorsed and extolled by the most eminent medical writers of the age and are recommended to cure the diseases for which it is advised.

Don't accept a substitute of unknown composition for this non-secret MEDICINE OF KNOWN COMPOSITION.

Save Your Money Boys.

From indications we are going to have a hard winter. Money seems to be mighty scarce and every thing the poor man eats has gone up in price. In order to make ends meet fellows, we'll have to ecomonize a good bit this winter, you can save in a great many ways, if you try. Don't spend quite so much for booze, cigars, cigarettes, chewing tobacco and things we can easily get along with out and put that little amount to what you do pay at home and see how much it will help your old "dad" in buying coal, wood and clothing for the smaller children. Put your savings this winter into your mother's pocket book and let her use her judgement as to what to buy. Its going to be a little tough with some this winter and those who have plenty and some to spare should look out for the ones that are in want. Do your home Missionary work here in Bellefonte this winter. We understand the American Lime & Stone Company has cut the working hours from 10 to 8 and the average man is only getting one dollar and twenty cents a day. Now just think, a great many of these men, have large families. We know of several men with ten children—now how far will $1.20 reach in this family.

The J. Howard Lingle company have also reduced the hours at their works. We sincerely hope business will pick up again so that every one can get all the work they can do.

THE WAY IT IS GOING IN ALTOONA

The first serious result of the present flurry in the money market of the country was felt in Altoona today, when the Pennsylvania railroad company announced the inauguration of a general plan of economy and retrenchment, which will effects the local shops and all divisions of the railroad and will mean the laying off of a large number of men at all points between Jersey City and Pittsburg.

Rumors to the effect that hundreds of men were to be suspended in the local shops and on the Middle and Pittsburg divisions were rife in the city this morning and these reports caused consernation among the employees of the company, none of the men knowing just where the suspensions were to start or end. It was known that there would be some suspensions, but none knew how extensive they were to be.

A representative of the Mirror called at the office of General Superintendent G. W. Creighton this morning and learned that the reported retrenchment was an assured fact, but that it would not be as serious as first reported about town. A high official of the company explained that, because many of the country's largest manufacturing concerns, handicapped by a lack of money at the present time, had cancelled big orders with the Penney, the outlook for business for the company during the next two months is exceedingly poor, and it has therefore become necessary for the company to reduce expenses in every way.

This lack of business, coupled with the usual falling off at this season of the year, has rendered it impossible for the Penney to keep their present force of employees going, and the retrenchment order accordingly went out from the head offices of the company. Officials at the general superintendent's office were unable to state what the extent of the reduction will be, as plans for carrying it out will not be completed before next Monday, but it will mean the suspension of a large number of men.

The superintendents of all divisions of the road, with the superintendent of the shops of Altoona and other places, were notified today to cut down expenses to a minimum, and to suspend men here and there, where a man can be dropped without crippling the force.

This will mean the suspension of several hundred men on the Middle and Pittsburg divisions and in the Altoona car and Juniata shops, but the officials state that this ecoromy will only be necessary for a short time and that, as soon as business picks up again they will be re-employed.

No details could be secured as to the number of men to be laid off, but it was stated that plans would be completed by Monday and that the exact number suspended would be announced at that time.

Breakfast Foods Analyzed.

The state department is conducting a rigid campaign in collecting samples of breakfast foods sold in this state. The entire collection has been sent to Dr. William Frear, chemist of the Pennsylvania State College, who is carefully analyzing and dissecting them. Commissioner Foust says that that the variety of these foods is somewhat surprising and that the work is undertaken solely in the interest of the consuming public of the state. If the breakfast foods, or any of them, are composed of sawdust the people have a right to know it. In due time the facts will be published.

The Local Option Movement is Bothering the Political Leaders

The political leaders of the state are puzzling their brains just now over the growing popularity of the local option movement throughout the state. It is evident that the next legislature will approve of such a measure. It is recognized by the politicians that it will be one of the principal issues which candidates for the House and Senate must meet. The liquor element, which includes brewers, distillers and wholesale dealers, is alive and its lieutenants are taking notice of things.

Information given by those in the confidence of the liquor interests is to to the effect that no concerted action will be taken to defeat local option, at least in principle, when it comes before however, to have the legislature agree upon what is described as a "fair bill." The craven bill killed at the last session, was not considered a fair bill even by its sponsors.

It is possible to frame a bill which will provide that the question may be submitted to a vote either by counties, cities, boroughs, townships, congressional or legislative districts, wards or election districts. Those interested in the liquor business are violently opposed to the suggestion of having the question decided by wards.

It is confended that by leaving the question to a separate vote by election districts the liquor business could not expand and that residential districts would be protected from such encroachments. Such a law, it is said, would not be opposed by the liquor people. How it will be viewed by the friends of local option remains to be seen. It is not likely that concessions of this kind will be voluntarially made.

In the country districts local option, whether it be applied to counties or boroughs as a whole, will have an important effect. It is claimed that in the small interior towns it will put 90 per cent of the hotels out of business. This is explained by the statement that hotels would not be self-sustaining if their revenues depended solely upon the income derived from roomers and boarders. The bar patronage, it is said, covers the deficit and supplies the profit when there is such a margin.

The Toymakers Made a Hit.

The much advertised opera, "The Toymakers" played to a large and very enthusiastic audience at the Garman Opera House on Friday evening. It was a case of laugh from beginning to end. The story of the opera runs in this way.

John Senior Stubbs of Middleton, England, is a peculiar high-tempered inventor who has a great love for a doll he has built because she is "so beautifully still and still so beautiful" and yet not quite content with such stillness he longs to bring her to life. In a fascinating manner he proceeds to do so with the mysterious aid of the village belle, who unknown to him discovers his secret and takes the place of the doll when she apparently comes to life. Wonderfully clever were all the situations and the ludiorous scenes that followed made great sport for the audience, who screamed with laughter. Every character in the cast was a star and deserve the highest prize for the manner in which they pleased the Bellefonte people Friday evening.

The Centre Hall Reporter and the Dale Murderer.

In the issue of the Reporter of November 22nd, of last year, the writer advanced two theories of where the murder might have taken place. The first theory was that the deed was committed at or near the barn. This was then and always has been the personal opinion of the editor. The second theory, advanced by many who expressed themselves on the subject, was that the killing was done on the south slope of Nittany Mountain, at or near what is known as Adam's road.

The Reporter's opinion as to the place where the murder was committed and by whom it was committed has never changed, it maintains at this time that the main points in theory number one, as printed in the issue referred to above, are true. These points follow:

(a) The murder was committed at or near the farm buildings.

(b) The time of the murder between five and six o'clock.

(c) The buggy with the dead man in it was side tracked until an auspicious moment when it was liberated.

A peculiar feature is that none of the five members of the Moyer family, tenants on the farm, saw Mr. Dale any time after about 2:30 p. m., and although Andy Moyer saw the buggy at the barn, observed that Mr. Dale's horse was in the stable, when he went into an adjoining lot for a calf, and was gone but ten minutes and during this time was in view of the buggy, he fails to know anything whatever about the murdered man leaving the Dale farm.

Traveled as a Man.

Miss Catharine Vosbaugh, who for nearly sixty years passed as a man, died at a hospital on November 11. Miss Vosbaugh was born in France, eighty-three years ago.

When a young woman she obtained employment as a bookkeeper in Joelin, Mo. This position she held for nine years, and then accepted a position in a St. Joseph, Mo., bank.

While in St. Joseph she married a woman with whom she lived for thirty years, as "Charles" Vosbaugh. The two women as man and wife came to Trinidad two years ago.

After the death of the "wife," Miss Vosbaugh worked in various capacities until she became so feeble that last year she was taken to a hospital.

It was then that her sex was discovered. But even after her recovery she refused to change her clothing, and continued to wear masculine habiliments to the end.

Home Love Is Best.

By JANE LUDLUM LEE.

Copyrighted, 1907, by P. C. Eastment.

"Miss Short, I want you to be my wife. I want to take you to my home in Germany and teach you to love my people as they will love you. Will you have me?"

These words fell from the lips of a handsome German who was staying at the Ellwood inn for the summer and who for weeks had been devoted to the beautiful Eleanor Short, heiress to a cool million.

"Oh, Count Andres, thank you so much, but I am not for other lands. I'm a home girl pure and simple. Your people would not love me. I had hoped you would go without making me say this."

"You knew, then, that I would ask you?"

The girl drew herself up with a stately manner and replied:

"Since you do not spare me why should I save you? Yes, I knew that you would."

"Americans do not know the meaning of home," sneered the count. "I could not have gone without asking you, Miss Short, because—well, it does not matter now. I am sorry I asked you, and I trust you will never regret your answer. You will hear of me again." And with a stiff bow he left her.

"DEAR HEART!" HE MURMURED.

Eleanor, once more on the piazza, dropped into an armchair and rocked slowly back and forth. It was a beautiful night, a night for happiness, not for tears, and why should she cry? Yet tears would come to her eyes. She did not love the man who had just left her, and she did love some one else. She did not want a German home nor a German husband, and she resented his attack on the American home. She leaned forward on the rail and sighed.

A shot rang through the stillness of the night air, followed by a piercing scream.

In an instant the conservative patrons of Elwood inn became a clamorous crowd, surging on the piazza from every direction. The men rushed this way and that, and in a few moments the lifeless form of a woman was carried into the hotel lobby. Miss Short had been shot in the back, perhaps fatally, and her slayer was still at large.

While the doctors worked over the injured girl searching parties were organized to find the assassin. The grounds were carefully guarded, detectives were called in and went through their usual methods of cross questioning the employees of the hotel, and hours dragged by with no trace of the man who had fired the shot. Bulletins were issued from time to time regarding the condition of the patient, and by morning symptoms showed that there was a chance for her recovery.

With the recovery of consciousness came speech, and her first rambling words were, "Oh, how could he!"

An anxious mother leaned over her and gently said:

"Wife, Eleanor, dear?"

The injured girl gasped, "The count!" and again lapsed into unconsciousness.

But one count had been at the hotel, and it did not take long to find him in his room and place him under arrest. He was placed under heavy bail until Miss Short either recovered to face him at the trial or died.

Days intervened while the patient hung between life and death, but finally she began to pick up the broken threads and was well on the road to recovery. Her mother, sitting by the bedside of the girl, fondly caressing her, said:

"Jack has been here every day, dear, asking and pleading to see you, and we have promised that he shall be the first. Can you see him today? The poor boy is almost frantic."

"Yes, mother; I want to see him whenever you say I may."

"He has been waiting in the other room for two hours, so I will call him."

A well built, brown faced man appeared at the door in answer to the mother's call and knelt down by the side of the girl, slipping one strong arm about her shoulders and nestling his bronzed face close to hers.

"Dear heart!" he murmured.

"Why, Jack, mother is here looking at us!" said Eleanor as the color came to her pale cheeks.

"Your mother knows all about it, dear. Haven't I been telling her every day for the past two weeks? If she don't know it it's not my fault. You see, I couldn't tell you, so I had to tell some one and thought your mother a safe repository for confidences. But you mustn't talk, dear. You are just to get well, and then I'm going to take you away for months and months just you and I, dear."

Eleanor proved a good patient, and each day found her stronger than the one gone by. Jack was in attendance almost as constantly as the nurse and Mrs. Short, and many happy hours he sat beside her, with her head on his shoulder, while he read aloud. One day as the twilight approached she leaned over and closed the book that he was reading.

"Jack, dear, you have not told me that you loved me."

"Why, Eleanor, how can you say that. It was the last thing I said last evening when your mother turned me out."

"I remember now, but that was yesterday," she said as she nestled closer to him. "That was a whole twenty-four hours ago."

"Dear heart," he said, with a smile, "as each twenty-four hours elapse I love you that much more. You know that, dear, and I don't see why we have to wait until you get entirely well. Why not be married quietly, right here in this little room, where we have been so happy with each other, and let me nurse you back to health?"

"Why, Jack, you selfish man! Not have a wedding, no bridesmaids and no long, white satin dress with a train! Oh, how could you even suggest it? But if you want me to I will, dear, for when you go far away from me the whole light seems to go out of my life, and it's been dark such a long time."

Jack's answer was to take her in his strong arms and hold her close to his heart for a moment as he whispered "Darling!"

"Jack," Eleanor murmured, "I want to ask you a question that has been on my mind ever since I regained consciousness. I wanted to ask mother, but feared to worry her. But if you will hold me tight I will ask you."

"What is it, dear?" answered Jack.

"Who shot me?" And her eyes closed as she asked the dreaded question.

"The poor count did not do it. I happened to be coming up the grounds that night as he left you, and I stopped to watch him. He walked down the front steps and sauntered over to the big elm tree at the south end of the grounds, when from the bushes the form of a woman appeared, and in an instant she leveled a pistol and shot at him. She missed him and the bullet struck you. It all came out in a few days. It has since come to light that the woman was his wife, whom he deserted in Germany."

"Oh, Jack! What suffering that wicked man has caused?"

"Yes. But he opened my eyes to how precious you were to me. I had taken you for granted, dear, not as a special blessing. We men are so selfish."

"Not you, Jack," she murmured as his arms closed around her.

He Was Examined.

Francois Arago, the great French scientist, was a precocious youth. He was prepared for the rigid examinations of the Ecole Polytechnique before he was seventeen years old. The examiner was almost brutal in his manner toward the young candidates. A favorite companion of Arago was badly frightened at his severe questions and failed to pass the examination. At length Arago's turn came.

"Young man," said the examiner sternly, "you are probably as ignorant as your companion. I advise you to go and complete your studies before you risk this examination."

"Monsieur," replied the boy, "timidity was all that prevented my companion from passing. He knew much more than he seemed to know."

"Timidity!" exclaimed the examiner. "The excuse of fools! Perhaps you are timid also."

"Far from it," returned Arago shortly.

"Take care. It would be wise to spare yourself the disgrace of being rejected!"

"The disgrace for me would lie in not being examined," said the young candidate proudly.

Arago's solution of the problems set before him was so accurate and so brilliant that at last his examiner sprang from his chair and, throwing his arms about the boy's neck in delight, exclaimed:

"Bravo! If you are not received into the Ecole Polytechnique, no one will be admitted."

And Arago then began a career which added greatly to the stock of human knowledge.

ELLEN TERRY'S COOKING.

How She Learned to Be a Good Housekeeper.

At twenty-one years of age Ellen Terry had been on the stage long enough to feel the necessity of a long vacation. In a little sketch of her life she goes to those six years of the simple life with much delight:

"Actors must take care of themselves and their voices, husband their strength for the evening's work, and when it is over they are too tired to do anything. For the first time I was able to put all my energies into a living. Charles Lamb says, I think, that when he left the East India House he felt embarrassed by the vast estates of time at his disposal and wished that he had a bailiff to manage them, but I knew no such embarrassment. I began gardening, 'the purest of human pleasures.' I learned to work and in time cooked very well, though my first essay in the difficult art was rewarded with dire and complete failure.

"It was a chicken. Now, as all the chickens had names—Sultan, Duke, Lord Tom Noddy, Lady Teazle and so forth—and as I was very proud of them as living birds, it was a great wrench to kill one at all, to start with. It was the murder of Sultan, not the killing of a chicken. However, at last it was done and Sultan deprived of his feathers, floured and trussed. I had no idea how this was all done, but I tried to make him sit up nicely like the chickens in the shops.

"He came up to the table looking magnificent—as large as any turkey.

"'Hasn't this chicken rather an odd smell?' said our visitor.

"'How can you?' I answered. 'It must be quite fresh—it's Sultan!'

"However, when we began to carve the smell grew more and more potent.

"I had cooked Sultan without taking out his in'ards!

"There was no dinner that day except bread sauce, beautifully made; well cooked vegetables and pastry like the foam of the sea. I had a wonderful hand for pastry."

SAVE BROKEN CHINA.

Order Brought Out of the Chaos of Bits of China.

Here is what a thrifty housewife has to say about utilizing broken bits of china:

"I was always averse to throwing any china away and so one day found I had quite a collection. What could I do with them? A happy thought struck me. Why not piece all together in a crazy pattern and so form a surface for a table?

"I bought one of those inexpensive bamboo tables you can get for 50 or 75 cents and found it answered very well. A bamboo table has the edge raised all around and so forms a bed for the china, bringing it level with the edges.

"Now for commencing the work.

"Take some putty and mold it well, leaving no hard lumps. To do this moisten with linseed oil. Then pull a small piece and cover a small portion of the table, beginning at the corners and working toward the middle. Next press the pieces of china close together, leaving a small ridge of putty between, which must be leveled with a knife.

"An old table knife is the best. Select five of the best pieces for the corners and the center, matching them if possible.

"Keep the table level. Thicker pieces of china will have to be pressed down harder. When finished, leave to harden and fill up all cracks with more putty. When this is done, gild the putty with Judson gold.

"The success of the table depends a great deal on what kind of china you use. The better the china the better the table.

"I found some of my best pieces in all sorts of odd places. One very pretty piece showing an old fashioned garden I found on the beach at the seashore. If you can manage to get any of your friends in the service to give you a piece of the 'mess' china, which often gets broken, it will greatly add to your collection."

It is for want of application rather than means that men fail of success.—La Rochefoucauld.

He Heard of It.

Admiral Walker was a fine old sailor, and he was recognized as thorough. No personal friendship softened his manners to a delinquent. One day when he was sailing out from Hampton Roads with the international fleet that helped us to celebrate the centennial of Washington's first inauguration his orders about weighing anchor were disobeyed by his dearest friend in the service, who was in command of one of the ships, and as the old Chicago, the flagship, passed the trembling culprit the navies of the world heard "his whiskers" thundering out from the bridge objurgations and expressing wonder at his own moderation in not putting his old comrade under arrest. At another time when the white squadron was sailing out of a Mediterranean bay another old friend worked his ship so awkwardly that the admiral—then nearly a "trade dollar admiral"—suspended him by signal in the face of the whole fleet. The punished captain, coming aboard to protest against his public reprimand, puffed out indignantly, "Why, sir, I never heard of such a thing." "Well," said John, pulling at his big side whiskers, "you've heard of it now."—Harper's.

Guests Who Won't Order.

The business man returned to his office in a bad temper after the luncheon hour. "I wish people who haven't minds of their own would come to a realizing sense of the bother that they are to their friends and would develop a little initiative on their own account," he said. "Maybe it's only a mistaken idea of politeness, but anyhow it's a nuisance to be entertaining a person at the club and have him utterly without ideas as to what he wants to eat and drink. You ask him and he says he'll leave it to you, which is exactly what you don't want him to do. How can you divine his tastes, I'd like to know? What appeals to you very likely won't to him, and you know and he knows it. But your selections from the menu are always met with the comment 'That's very nice,' or 'You couldn't suit me better.' And so you go through the meal in a hit and miss fashion that certainly gets on the nerves of the host. The next time I run up against that kind of man I'm just going to sit back and let him do the entire ordering."—New York Press.

Where the Dog Is Valued.

In northern France and in Belgium especially the dog is indeed the friend of man. He is made to work. He gets little play except that small amount deemed sufficient to prevent canine dullness, yet he is so loved and so well cared for by his owner that he becomes a most important member of the family. The farmer, the tradesman, the householder, the guardsman of the frontier worships his dog—one of the first things he thinks of when founding his little home. He takes delight in rousing the dog's intelligence and loses no chance of pitting that intelligence against others. Local farmers vie with each other to improve a breed. Dog clubs take up the work, holding exhibitions in villages and towns. Cities challenge neighboring municipalities to contests on the grandest scale.—Wide World Magazine.

Culinary Hints.

To cook potatoes in a different way try them in Hungarian style. They must be pared and cut into cubes of like size and not very large. Parboil them for three minutes. Drain off the water and cook them in melted butter, shaking rather than stirring them. When tender, but unbroken, add enough butter to what remains in the pan to make two tablespoonfuls in all after the potatoes have been turned out. Stir into this butter two tablespoonfuls of flour and a little onion juice and when well mixed add a cupful of milk. Let this boil and then remove it from the fire and add the beaten yolk of an egg, some salt and mild red pepper, known as paprika. Return the cooked potatoes to this sauce and let them stand till very hot again. Place them in a hot dish and sprinkle finely minced parsley over them.

Whole Wheat Bread.

Scald a cup of milk, take from the fire and add a heaping teaspoonful of salt, a level teaspoonful of sugar and a tablespoonful of shortening. Add a cupful of cold water to the scalded solved in one-half of a cup of lukewarm add one-half of a yeast cake dissolved in one-half of a cup of luke warm water. Beat in enough whole wheat flour to make rather a thin batter, beat well, cover and set aside until light. Then beat in as much more flour as is possible with a spoon. It must be stiff. Beat well, turn into greased tins, let rise until light again and bake an hour in a moderate oven.

How to Do Without Holidays.

The most healthy and the most successful people are those who have some pleasant occupation and go on doing the same thing day after day, year after year. These folks do not want holidays. The spirit of restlessness is fatal to health and argues "nerves," and holidays as largely taken now are nothing but just the result of a spirit of unrest.—Books of Today.

PAIN

Pain in the head—pain anywhere, has its cause. Pain is congestion, pain is blood pressure—nothing else usually. At least, so says Dr. Shoop, and to prove it he has created a little pink tablet. That tablet—called Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablet—coaxes blood pressure away from pain centers. Its effect is charming, pleasingly delightful. Gently, though safely, it surely equalizes the blood circulation.

If you have a headache, it's blood pressure.

If it's painful periods with women, same cause.

If you are sleepless, restless, nervous, it's blood congestion—blood pressure. That surely is a certainty, for Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets stop it in 20 minutes, and the tablets simply distribute the unnatural blood pressure.

Bruise your finger, and doesn't it get red, and swell, and pain you? Of course it does. It's congestion, blood pressure. You'll find it where pain is—always. It's simply Common Sense.

EARLE C. TUTEN.

George B. Cortelyou, capable and conservative, the next Republican Candidate for President.

Lt. Gov. Chanler, of New York will be the Democratic Candidate.

New York's electoral vote is necessary to an election.

Cortelyou is a citizen of New York.

What is your view of the next years presidential contest, asked the the reporter of Mr. Rynder:

"My judgement is" said Mr. Rynder, "that the Republicans will nominate Secretary of the Treasury Geo. B. Cortelyou for President.

Ex-President Cleveland said of him, that he is always ready and Ex-President McKinley said "Cortelyou never loses his head."

He was selected by President Roosevelt for Chairman of the National committee, and consecutively for Secretary of Commerce and Labor, for Postmaster General and for Secretary of the Treasury. No rich man has risen in the financial firmament as George B. Cortelyou since James Cooke electrified the world by his management of the finances of the civil war.

Just think of it, this quiet, soft voiced, unassuming man sat down in the Sub Treasury at New York, and poured four hundred millions of dollars of government money into the financial wreckers chasm to save the country from a panic, which nothing else could have done. This cause has saved railroads, banks, manufactures and the laboring people from what would have been the greatest panic the country ever knew, because it had a much greater (three to five hundred per cent) body of credit to work on.

When this crisis is passed the whole world will turn to the "capable and conservative," man who met and mastered the onslaught of the wreckers.

That is why the cool calculating judgement of all classies who deserve business prosperity will settle on Secretary Cortelyou as the man to lead to a full rehabilition of our prosperity and steer us safely through the Scylla and Chorybdis of the wrecker storm.

The surface outlook is for Mr. Bryan's nomination by the Democrats, but the undercurrent is tending with great force toward Lt. Gov. Louis Stuyvesant Chanler as the man who can carry New York, New Jersey and Connecticut. It is not necessary to go into detsils as to Mr. Chanler's elements of strength. I do not know of any one able to meet them except the organizing ability and greater achievements of Secretary Cortelyou.

For these reasons I think the fight will be Cortelyou vs. Chanler, and it will be a mighty conflict.

WILLIAM S. DONLEY HELD FOR THE MURDER OF HIS NIECE MARY DONLEY

Hearing Takes Place Behind Steel Barred Windows and Doors in the County Jail—But Five Witnesses Testify When Alderman Anthony Bound Prisoner Over for Appearance at Next Term of Court

Notwithstanding the fact that the utmost secrecy was maintained regarding the time and place for the hearing of William S. Donley, charged with the murder of his little 9-year-old niece, many knew that it would occur on Wednesday, and that the place was to be the Clinton county jail.

From about 2 o'clock in the afternoon persons were admitted to the jail who were in one way or another interested. There was no need of ringing the door bell, as Constable Ellis Myers knew everyone who was eligible to be present.

Through the kindness of Sheriff J. H. Mussina tables and chairs were at the service of the representatives of the press, which included J. Foster Bell of the Williamsport News and E. F. Wolfe, of the Williamsport Sun, as well as representatives of the Democrat, Express and Clinton County Times.

The time of the hearing was set for 2.30 o'clock, but on account of the lateness of several interested parties the taking of testimony did not commence until after 3 o'clock.

About 50 persons were present, which included witnesses and others, and the prisoner was brought from the steel cage to the juvenile ward where the hearing took place behind steel barred windows and doors.

At first glance one noticed that Donley was a trifle nervous and his face was very pale. When he entered the room Captain W. C. Kress, who is retained as his counsel, grasped the hand of the prisoner, after which Donley was seated directly so he could note the expresions made for or against his case.

Archibald M. Hoagland, a stenographer of Williamsport, was present and took notes of the trial as it proceeded. Alderman John P. Anthony of Lock Haven heard the case and District Attorney Henry Hipple acted for the commonwealth.

When Dr. W. J. Gilmore of Renovo the first witness called, was summoned to the stand there was exceeding quiet as he related the fact concerning his examinations of certain parts of the murdered girl's anatomy. Portions of this well known physician's testimony cannot be published. He stated that he first examined the dead girl at a point in Renovo known as the "dumps," where he found the child cold in death. Some of the under garments were torn and dishevelled and also that there was a laceration of the foischette. Drs. Gilmore and Reach also made a more rigid examination of the body at Gann's undertaking establishment, but the technical terms used and the real portion of this gentleman's testimony is not fit for publication, as previously stated.

Dr. Gilmore has in his possession possibly 15 exhibits, including certain parts of the child's garments, as well as a part of the shirt worn by Donley on the night the murder was committed. This gentleman stated that "death of the child was due to strangulation" and that he found that the tongue was swollen and same could not be kept in mouth after death; neck bruised, eyes bulged out of sockets.

Dr. Gilmore was subjected to a severe cross-examination by Captain Kress, but the testimony given was practically the same. Dr. Gilmore said he made the examination at the instance of acting Coroner J. J. Kintner and Detective Robert T. Kroft.

Roy Brown was the next witness called. He stated he resided in Renovo and that he and several companions had discovered the dead body at 2.10 o'clock in the morning. Body was lying on right side. The undergarments were exposed and torn and a piece of newspaper covered the child's face. Some minor details were also brought out through the witness but they have previously been published.

Mrs. Laura Stout was next called. This lady stated that she lived near the Donley family for the past year; saw William Donley and Mary Donley in the rear of the Donley home at 5.30 o'clock on the day of the murder. Noticed the child go into a water closet and Donley into a wood shed. Said that little Mary Donley spoke to the child of Mrs. Stout when going down the yard. On cross examinations Mrs. Stout said she did not see prisoner carry any wood from the wood house nor did she again see him or the child that day.

Michael Heyes sworn: Said he lived on Fourteenth street near Donley's; saw Donley on October 29 at about 5 minutes of 7 coming across the railroad tracks running toward him; thought it was a railroad detective chasing a man; recognized prisoner; noticed mud on coat; trousers rolled up; wore derby hat; had no overcoat on at time. Mr. Hays said it was very dark at the time and that he was on his way to work; spot of mud on Donley's coat was about size of a silver dollar.

The most important witness of the hearing was Edward Kelly, a young man about 24 years of age. He said in part that he knew Donley all his life; was his bosom friend, but on night of murder was sick. Stated he met Donley at about 7 o'clock on night of tragedy; talked with him and walked up to Ninth street at time; Donley asked him to go into a saloon and purchased a half pint of whiskey, which prisoner said he wanted for his grandmother; got whiskey, but neither drank of it; later secured a bucket and got some bear, which both drank.

Talked with Donley and said to him, "Did you do this terrible crime?" Donley burst into tears; Kelly immediately left prisoner, who said, "My God, what will my sister say? she's coming home tonight;" said Donley asked mother for 50 cents and was refused; witness stated he told Councilman Clonin of what he had discovered and said he might have let a few words "slip out," which eventually led to Donley's arrest. Kelly said he and Donley had at times been intoxicated, but on this occasion both were sober. Said, he believed he gave the exact words Donley said.

During the testimony Donley was deathly pale and the witness was perceptibly affected when he gave testimony against his life long friend.

No more witnesses were called and the prisoner was held on the charge of murder without bail for a hearing at the next term of court.

R. T. Kroft, the detective who affected the capture of Donley, and incidentally made the arrest, stated to the newspaper men that he had 10 of his best men in Renovo within a short time after the murder. At no time were the other suspects, who were arrested and later released, under any suspicion by any of his detectives. Mr. Kroft desires to especially commend the county commissioners and Sheriff J. H. Mussina for their prompt action in securing experienced men to work on the case and also for the reward which the commissioners offered at once, which acted as an incentive. He said, however, that under no consideration would he or any of his men accept any reward, as all were hired and paid for their work. Mr. Krott maintains three detective agencies, one at Pittsburg, another at Altoona and one at Ridgway. He has 42 men in services continually and they never work with local police. He and some of his men have frequently done detective work in Lock Haven. Mr. Kroft was not called on the stand at the hearing.

District Attorney-elect H. T. Hall, who will have charge of the case for the commonwealth when it comes to trial in January, was present and listened attentively to the testimony of several witnesses.

Buster Brown's Resolution.

That whereas I got myself in a whole it reminds us that lots of people get themselves in a hole by their own carelessness; then expect some one else to get them out. Lawyers make their living by getting people out of holes. A man never goes to a lawyer to find out how to do right or how to be honest, he goes to him in trouble. He never goes to the doctor to find out how to take care of his health while he has it. Come let us be reasonable, if we are honest and on the level, and get enough sleep we won't need those M. D.s or L. L. D.s or D. D.s help. God did not intend us to be sick, sinful or "broke" if we stick to the rules. If you plant weeds you don't expect corn.

The Academy Held Kiski Down.

Yesterday was the proudest day in the football history of the Bellefonte Academy when their crack eleven held down the Kiskiminetas team to a nothing to nothing score. But that isn't all. The Academy went into the game with a bull dog spirit and determination to win if possible, that unnerved the "Kiski" boys at the very start, apparently, for their heavy and experienced rushers were driven back time and time again by the terrific rushes of the Academy players, large openings being found frequently in the line through which Weaver, Smith, Oberlin and Lyon plunged for long gains repeatedly. And then when the backs were not carrying the ball, Elsey or Pantall would be seen either ripping off a long end run or executing a successful forward pass for big gains. Up, up the field in the first half the Academy forced the ball by the cleverest kind of football playing to the bitter disappointment and chagrin of the strong Kiski players who seemed unable to check the advance, but to the surprise and delight of the large crowd on the side lines who little realized that the Academy had a team able to put up such a successful offensive game. But the disappointment came to the Academy and her friends when after reaching scoring distance, the team was penalized fifteen yards because an Academy player in the strongest formation the Academy has, got too anxious and failed to take his proper position outside of tackle.

In this half the visitors never had a chance to score. Once in a while they spurted and made a few successful rushes but they were not consistent in their gains.

The second half was an exact repetition of the first. Our boys on the hill in the language of State College men, 'played rings about Kiski" and made a noble effort to score but, as in the first half, when the opportunity came it was unfortunately lost, this time owing to a fumble. And yet no blame could be attached to any player, for it was the wonder of all oclookers that the wet and muddy ball was not fumbled oftener. It wasn't fumbled more than a half dozen times during the entire game. It was indeed a gala day for the Academy If the weather had been more favorable many more would have witnessed this exciting contest than did. It was a day long to be remembered, for the Academy had played to a standstill the Champions of Eastern Ohio and Western Pennsylvania—a team which no local teams of Pittsburg will play this year singly but which a combination of the best players of these teams will play on Friday of this week—a team which defeated the W. and J. Academy 27 0, Indiana Normal 46-4 and held down the "crack" Slippery Rock Normal eleven to a score of 5-6.

Do you wonder that the home boys were in such high glee last night around the biggest bon fire, perhaps, this town has ever seen. Coach Hirshman of State College deserves great credit for the success he had with the Academy players. Now get ready to see the hardest and best game of the season at the glass works meadow, on Saturday Nov. 23rd at 3 o'clock. This will be the last game of the season.

PRETTY WEDDING AT UNIONVILLE

Miss Alice Buck Becomes The Wife of Arthur H. Bosworth.

For several weeks the people of Unionville have been on the qui vive on account of the approaching nuptials of Miss Alice Buck, the accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Buck, of that place, to Arthur H. Bosworth, of Buffalo, which happy event occurred at the home of the bride's parents, on Wednesday, at 5:30 p. m., in the presence of a large number of invited guests. The out-of-town guests were Mrs. Bosworth, mother of the groom, of Buffalo; Dr. E. J. Baird and family, of Lock Haven; Mr. and Mrs. Clark Miller, Esq., Misses Nell Stevens and Annie Rich, of Clearfield, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Griest of Barnsboro; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Griest, of Mt. Union; Mr. and Mrs. Clark Grazier, of Huntingdon, Furnace; Don. Baird, of Brownsville, Ky.; Miss Nannie Holt, of Philipsburg; Miss Florence Shoemaker, of Martinsburg; Mrs. Dr. Quinn, of Du Bois; and John L. Rich, of Tyrone. The bride was given away by her father. She was handsomely gowned in white silk covered with white netting, carrying a beautiful bouquet of flowers. The groom wore the conventional black; the room was beautifully decorated with lovely flowers. The best man was Robert Morton of Buffalo, and maid of honor was Miss Mary Buck, sister of the bride. The ribbon girls were Misses Marie Griest, Mary E. Griest, Bess Brown and Florence Baird. At the approach of the wedding party, the beautiful Lohengrin wedding march was sung by Miss Laura Rumberger accompanied on the piano by Miss Alice Henshy. The ceremony that made them man and wife was said by Rev. Dr. Piper, of Millersburg, who knows how to tie a knot that can never be "tied loose." After the ceremony came congratulations, after which all repaired to the dining room where a sumptuous wedding dinner awaited the happy crowd. The honorable waiting maids were Misses Eloise Buck, Fred Smith and Marion Rumberger. The bride and groom left on their wedding tour, on the 7 57 p. m. train for Williamsport and other eastern cities after which they will be "at home" in Buffalo, where the groom holds a lucrative clerical position. The presents were numerous and valuable. The day was an ideal one for a wedding, not a cloud in the sky, but just as the happy couple were about to board the train a heavy shower set in which almost deluged them. It was a shower of rice and old shoes. The bride is one of our best and most highly esteemed young ladies, and the groom is a young man of irreproachable character, and we join their many friends in wishing them a life of wedded bliss.

The Youths Companion Calender for 1908.

The publishers of the Youth's Companion will, as always at this season, present to every subscriber who subscription (1.75) is paid for 1908 a beautiful Calendar for the new year. Four paintings by artists of distinction are produced in the four panels of the Calendar by a process of color printing which has been recently brought to remarkable excellence. The first of the panels is an inspiring sea, scene, full of the beauty of the wide ocean and sky, and the joyous rush of the homeward-bound ship. The second is a fine cattle piece. The third pictures an old mill at Zaandam—typically Dutch in treatment. The fourth panel depicts a "Girl with Roses"—a charming face, exquisite in color and expression. All the pictures are worthy of preservation long after 1908 had passed into the good old times.

An English Author Wrote:

"No shade, no shine, no fruit, no flowers, no leaves, -November!" Many Americans would add no freedom from catarrh, which is so aggravated during this month that it becomes constantly troublesome. There is abundant proof that catarrh is a constitutional disease. It is related to scrofula and consumption being one of the wasting diseases. Hood's Sarsaparilla has shown that what is capable of eradicating scrofula, completely cures catarrh, and taken in time prevents consumption. We cannot see how any sufferer can put off taking this medicine, in view of the widely published record of its radical and permanent cures. It is undoubtedly American's Greatest Medicine for American's Greatest Disease—Catarrh.

Back With the P. R. R.

W. E. Tyson & Son, well known in this city, have disposed of their coal business at Tyrone to Joe. M. Howel, "Billy," as we are wont to call him, has gone back again into the employ of the P. R. R., having accepted an excellent position as assistant to A. A. Witter, chief operator of the Tyrone division. Mr. Tyson's long experience as a telegraph operator in past years amply qualifies him for the new position.

MAYOR OF SUNBURY Says Pe-ru-na Is a Good Medicine.

Hon. C. C. Brooks, Mayor of Sunbury, Ohio, also Attorney for Farmers' Bank and Sunbury Building and Loan Co., writes:

"I have the utmost confidence in the virtue of Peruna. It is a great medicine. I have used it and I have known many of my friends who have obtained beneficial results from its use. I cannot praise Peruna too highly."

HON. C. C. BROOKS.

THERE are a host of petty ailments which are the direct result of the weather.

This is more true of the excessive heat of summer and the intense cold of winter, but is partly true of all seasons of the year.

Whether it be a cold or a cough, catarrh of the head or bowel complaint, whether the liver be affected or the kidneys, the cause is very liable to be the same.

The weather slightly deranges the mucous membranes of the organs and the result is some functional disease.

Peruna has become a standby in thousands of homes for minor ailments of this sort.

Academy Wins Great Game.

The Bellefonte Academy football eleven played a splendid game on Saturday against the strong Altoona High School team and defeated them by a score of 11—0. The Academy had their chances to score in the first half but failed to embrace them. In the second half their line rushes, end kicks and forward passes worked to perfection and enabled them to score twice. The most spectacular play of the game was when Reitmyer from midfield made a beautiful forward pass for thirty-five yards to Pantall who sided by the excellent interference of Elsey crossed Altoona's line and scored the second touchdown for the Academy.

The ideal day for football attracted a large crowd of enthusiasts who were well pleased with the excellent playing of every single one of the Academy team.

The ball was kept in Altoona's territory most of the time. In fact the Academy goal was never threatened. The large crowd of "rooters" from Altoona made a hard effort to cheer their boys to victory but in vain. This was Altoona's first defeat by a school team. The line up:

The Academy boys celebrated their victory with a big bon-fire on Saturday night. Hershman the State College full back coached the Academy the past week

Bellefonte	Position	Altoona H. S.

Football, Football.

The last football game of the season in Bellefonte will be played on the Meadow Brook Park on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, between the Bellefonte Academy eleven and the Lock Haven Normal team. The latter school boasts of the strongest team this year in their history. They defeated Dickinson Seminary at Williamsport by a score of 16—0, Bucknell Reserves at Lewisburg by 11—0, and Academy two weeks ago by a big score. Since that day, however a perfect transformation has taken place and under the skillful coaching of Hirshman of State College the Academy is now playing championship ball.

The Normals are so excited over the game and so afraid the Academy will surprise them on Saturday that they have chartered a special train over the Central R. R. of Pa., which will arrive here about 1 15 p. m. Over 150 "rooters" are expected. Let every lover of fine football be on hand to cheer the home boys, and have your ticket on your person. No "spongers" wanted. Admission 25 cents. Ladies 15 cents. McIlven of State will officiate and Hirshman will be here Friday and Saturday to look after his Academy boys.

Not His Place to Laugh.

Milly is a sweet young lady, usually very sedate and self possessed. But today she was suffering under the stress of suppressed emotion.

"Calm yourself, my dear," urged a sympathetic friend, "and tell me all about it."

"Well, you see," began Milly, wiping her eyes, "papa caught a wicked cold, and mother persuaded him to coddle himself to get rid of it. So he sat, dressed in pajamas, on his folding bed in front of a blazing fire in his bedroom. He had a steaming bowl of gruel on his knee, and his feet were in a pail of mustard and water.

"Presently we heard a terrific noise overhead, and we all rushed upstairs to see what had happened to poor papa. We found that the folding bed had collapsed in the middle, and there he was stuck in the angle, scalding gruel in his lap and pouring all over him, while ma was sitting in a pool of mustard and water on the floor, laughing herself into hysterics. And, oh, the things he said because she didn't go and pull him out! That's why I'm overcome, my dear!"—London Answers.

A Bundle of Blunders.

Don't say that "cleanliness is next to godliness," a statement which would be untrue if it were not unmeaning. If you must gauge the value of this excellent quality quote the original correctly and say that cleanliness is next to goodliness, meaning thereby that, where this is lacking, a clean and well kept person has an attraction and a comeliness only second to actual beauty.

Never talk of "the worst coming to the worst," an impossible occurrence, since it is already there. The worse may come to the worst, as, alas, it often does, but when the worst has come there is no more to be said.

Please do not speak of your "mutual friend." If A is a friend of B and C, A is not a mutual but a common friend.

But, above all, if you would be blameless never talk of "common sense," as though it were or could be an exceptional or rare possession of a favored few. Common sense is the sense common to all, which long may we all enjoy.

Shakespeare Versus Burns.

At the close of a lecture to the members of a certain literary society the following dialogue between a Scotchman and the lecturer was overheard:

"Ye think a fine lot o' Shakespeare, doctor?"

"I do, sir," was the emphatic reply.

"An' ye think he was mair clever than Robbie Burns?"

"Why, there's no comparison between them!"

"Maybe no, but ye tell us the nicht it was Shakespeare who wrote 'Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.' Now, Robbie would never have written sic nonsense as that."

"Nonsense, sir!" thundered the indignant doctor.

"Aye, just nonsense. Robbie would hae kent fine that a king, or a queen either, disna gang to bed wi the crown on his head. They hang it ower the back o' a chair." The doctor's face dropped, for he realized that his lecture had been given in vain.—Scottish Nights.

Gold Is Everywhere.

Gold can most profitably be extracted from certain mines where the ore is rich and not too difficult to work, but should these deposits ever peter out there is no fear that the world would suffer for lack of a gold supply, for there are many other sources which are as yet untouched, but for working which profitable methods would be devised if need were. Granite, for example, contains an appreciable quantity of gold, and if it were not under present conditions too expensive a matter to extract it we should find Scotland and Cornwall rivaling the Transvaal and the Klondike. The sea also contains gold in solution, and the man who invents a cheap method of getting it out will make himself richer than all the millionaires that ever lived. Gold is also constantly falling all over the surface of the world, blown to us in minute quantities along with cosmic dust, which comes from interstellar space.—Black and White.

Easily Stated.

A committee having in charge a local entertainment went to a noted editor to request him to take part in it.

"What do you want me to do, gentlemen?" he asked.

"We would like to have you give us a talk on spelling reform," they replied.

"Well," he rejoined, "I can give you my idea of spelling reform in one sentence. Just leave 'me' off the 'programme.'"

A Working Majority.

"Why go further?" interrupted Senator Sniffkins. "The two classes you have named constitute a safe working majority."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

The Deeps Are Dumb.

The greatest golfers seldom talk about their golf any more than the greatest cricketers talk about their cricket. It is the enthusiastic duffer who enjoys conversing about "his game."—London Truth.

AFTER GAME VIOLATORS.

Found that Potter, Clinton and Lycoming Counties Have Many Bears.

State Game Warden Joseph Berrier has just returned to Harrisburg from a trip through Potter, Clinton and Lycoming counties, where he went to hunt down some violators of the game laws, and reports an unusual number of deer and bears in the woods north. There are more deer and bear in the woods, according to Warden Berrier, than there have been for many years.

One man in Potter county saw five bears in one morning and killed them all. Three were old ones and two were half-grown cubs. The people in Potter county are thinking of extending an invitation to President Roosevelt to go up there and hunt bear.

Dr. Kalbfus, secretary of the state game commissioner, is off on a hunting expedition, in Centre county, and will remain in the woods until after the deer shooting begins to see that there are no violations of the law. This year it is unlawful to shoot any deer but a buck with horns, and hunters are much dissatisfied with the law. They argue that it is unfair to let does and fawns pass them and not get a shot, and it is supposed that this particular section of the game law will be frequently violated. The law was passed to prevent hunters shooting each other by mistake, it being taken for granted that when a hunter sees a buck's horns he is then certain he is not shooting at a man.

Miss Heinle's Recital

On Wednesday evening Nov. 27th, Miss Bettie Heinle will give another of her delightful recitals. She will be assisted in this entertainment by Miss Bertha Collins who posesses a beautiful cultivated soprano voice. Miss Heinle gave an entertainment during the summer and her work was perfect and greatly appreciated by a very large audience. Her recital this time will be a costumed affair. In every act she will appear in a different costume, which will add greatly to the evenings entertainment which will be held in the Masons auditorium in the Reynold's block promptly at 8 15 and will last until 10 o'clock after which a dance will be held. Those holding tickets to the recital will also be admitted to the dance.

We have never had the pleasure of hearing Miss Collins sing, but a great many in Bellefonte have heard her and pronounce her voice to be clear, sweet and beautiful. The admission will be 50 cents.

Col. Chambers to Stay in Bellefonte.

Just because he is advertising his home on east Lynn street for sale the report has been circulated that Col. E. R. Chambers and family intended leaving Bellefonte. To the writer the Colonel denied the report most emphatically. He stated that here is where he has lived the most of his life and here is where he would live the balance of it. His reason for wishing to sell his home is that it is too expensive an establishment for him to keep up and, in addition, is much larger than his family now needs, inasmuch as his two boys are away from home and there are only he and Mrs. Chambers and their daughter, Helen. They wish to either sell or rent their home and move into a smaller house or a nice flat somewhere down town where he will be nearer his office

Ben—Hur.

The mathematician will find plenty of scope for calculation and opportunities for some very interesting computations in the forth-coming production of Klaw & Erlanger's "Ben Hur." A well-known person of this city, who delights in delving in all sorts of problems and who was a careful students of the dramatization of Gen. Wallace's story, when presented in New York, has given much thought to an interesting compellation of "Ben-Hur." From his deductions are given the following—There are 18,500 words in the manuscript, read by seventeen principals in one hour and 58 minutes. There are seventeen scenes in the play. The canvas in these scenes would cover an area of 102,740 square feet, and would be sufficient, if of the proper kind, to clothe about eighty1 90 feet, racing cutters, such as Reliance, the Columbia, the Constitution, or any of the Shamrocks. The entire scenery and properties exclusive of the chariot race apparatus, weight 42,509 lbs. or 21¼ tons. Thirty-six men set and clear the stage of this equipment or handle it twice in 34 minutes, the combined waits between the acts of each performance. There are 375 lines of about the size of clothes-lines used in suspending and holding the drops or hanging pieces of scenery, and as "strip lines." There are 150 feet of rope in each line, making 56,250 feet or 10¼ miles of rope, used in the production of "Ben-Hur" in Altoona all this week.

Big Demand for Coal.

The sudden advent of cold weather has made hustling times for the coal dealers all of whom are busy filling the orders which have poured in upon them during the past few days even though the price is higher than ever. While it has been claimed that the demands for anthracite coal at this time is beyond the ability of the companies to supply our local dealers have been able to secure sufficient to keep their teams busy, although they have not been able to lay in a large surplus stock. Their principal difficulty has been in filling their orders fast enough to suit their customers. Nearly everyone postponed buying their coal until they really needed it, and now they all want it at once. Our local coal dealers are handling the situation well and no one is suffering from a want of fuel.

Are You Going Hunting?

The deer season opens Friday 15th and a great lot of hunters have started for the mountains.

The Gentzel party of hunters—usually having good luck—took the train on Tuesday evening for their old hunting ground in the Green Woods, Clearfield county. The party is composed of Ben Gentzel, Isaac Miller, Mart. Dale and son, and Ed. Eckenroth, of Bellefonte; Charles Bilger, George Gettig and Mr. Dunkelberger, of Pleasant Gap. They contemplate remaining until end of the season. The deer, bear, wildcats and catamounts will have to make themselves scarce for the Gentzel crowd are sharp shooters.

Friday the Panther Hunting Club, of Bellefonte, left for the Panther Run. They will be located along the Beech Creek Railroad, some twelve or fifteen miles west of Mill Hall. Plenty of small game can be found in this territory with the possibility of running onto a deer or two. This club is composed of Harry Gerbrich, John Knisely, W. C. Cassidy, Jack Decker, R. S. Brouse, Thomas Moore, J. M. Cunningham, Maurie Jackson, Linn, John McGinley and Law Getig. They expect to be out two weeks and bring in their share of game.

The famous Riley party, of Boalsburg, left Friday for Stonevalley, Huntingdon county, at Rose Mills. Each man is thoroughly familiar with that portion of the county, and if there is anything like a buck with horns they will get him. This party will consist of Thomas and Calvin Riley, Homer Barr, Oscar Stover, Wm McClintic, Christ Meyer, Adam Krumrine, Darius Waite and Morris Miller, of Bellefonte, will go out with this crowd. These two gentlemen will have to take something to keep them from getting the buck fever, for that disease is mighty dangerous.

The Modocs is another hunting club from Boalsburg who in former seasons have made a great record. It has a number of Wm. Tells who never miss the bull's eye. They will leave Friday for the Bear Meadows and expect to bring home their full quota of game. The Modocs are Westly and Daniel Meyer, Harry Bailey, H. Gingrich, of Boalsburg; Henry, Newton and Baker Krebs, of Pine Grove Mills; Mr. Lauver and Wm. Wagner, of Altoona. The clubs at Pine Grove Mills, State College and other places in Pennsvalley will go into the Seven mountains.

A party of ten from Lock Haven left Wednesday for the headwaters of Rattlesnake Run, to remain the entire two weeks. They will be headed by Harry Marshall and George Gramley. Three clubs from Mill Hall are arranging to spend the entire deer season in the Bald Eagle ridges in the neighborhood of Hays Run. They will be captained by James Chatham, Charles Snyder and Elmer Flanigan respectively.

The Roosevelt Club, with John Lemon as captain, will go on their old camping ground near Six Mile Run.

Great Concert Booked.

On Tuesday evening Dec. 3, the Otterbein Male Quartette Company will be in Bellefonte and entertain our people for the benefit of the Y. M. C. A. This is said to be one of the best concert companies on the road. This is what "Sunshine Willits" says about the quartette. It affords me great pleasure to speak a good word for the "Otterbeins." They are refined gentlemen; their selections are excellent and their rendering thoroughly artistic, and yet popular. They gave great satisfaction to all who heard them. A. A. Willits.

Annapolis Defeats Penn State, 6 to 4.

The Naval Academy won from Pennsylvania State at Annapolis on Saturday afternoon by a score of 6 to 4, pulling the game out of the hole in the last two minutes of the play, when Vorhis fumbled one of Douglas' long punts and carried it over the goal line. Lange kicked the goal.

In the first half Vorhis kicked goal from the field, and throughout the game the visitors made the most consistent gains, McCleary, in particular, carrying the ball through the Navy line with great regularity.

The Navy's weak game was redeemed by the brilliant playing of Captain Douglas, who made the only substantial gains for his side, besides tackling fiercely and getting off well-placed punts for an average of 45 yards.

Must Publish Schedules.

The railroad commission of Georgia has issued an order compelling the railroad companies to publish in the daily newspapers announcements of all changes made in the schedules of trains for three days previous to their going into effect. A second paragraph of the order provides that the time tables shall be printed continuously in some newspaper of general circulation, provided that the rate charged by the newspaper shall not exceed the rate provided for sheriffs advertisements.

If the P. R. R. would publish their time tables in the newspapers as they did at one time it would be a great convenience to the patrons of the road who do not live near a station and have no means of finding out the time running of trains.

NOTICE TO WALKER CUSTOMERS and the General public.

This is to notify you that there is no truth in the published statement that a law has been enacted by the Pennsylvania Legislature requiring so-called soap clubs to pay a yearly mercantile tax of $10.00 or any other.

Pay no attention to such rumors. The United States Supreme Court has ruled many times that such a law would be unconstitutional.

Continue to operate Walker Clubs as recommended in the Catalogue, and no one can legally molest you,

MISS ELIZABETH BURCHENAL.

Teaches Girls In the Public Schools How to Play.

Folk dancing, relay races, shuttle races and athletic games are now the happy portion of the public school girls of New York city. Gymnastic work for girls has always been a problem with the school authorities in the crowded districts of the largest city of the country. In the congested parts where playgrounds are unknown the boys use the streets and sidewalks for ball, but the little girls have to be taught how to play.

The teaching of play is the mission of Miss Elizabeth Burchenal. She is director of the girls' branch of the Public School Athletic league. This organization is misleading as to its name, for it is not a part of the public school system. It is a philanthropic society carried on by a group of charitable women who have permission to use the gymnasium of the various schools. The methods of the league are unique. Miss Burchenal alone receives a compensation for her work. She instructs such teachers in the elementary schools to dance as wish to avail themselves of the privilege, and they pass on their knowledge to their little pupils. Both lessons take place out of the regular school hours. The work of the school league is at the beginning of the second year. Over 6,000 little girls from crowded tenement homes were taught the joy of playing last year.—Delineator.

Hand Him a Lemon.

Here are directions for a lemon party:

As the guests arrive at the lemon party meet them at the door and hand him or her a lemon, with a little bundle of Japanese toothpicks. These may be purchased for 5 cents a box, each box containing ten or more little bundles of toothpicks. When all the guests have arrived give them seats at a table, provide each one with a sharp pointed knife and tell them they are expected to make an animal from the lemon they hold and that a prize is to be given to the one who makes the most artistic and a consolation prize for the most grotesque. The prizes for the same may be a silver lemonade spoon for the first and a lemon shaker or squeezer for the second. A lemon race may follow, playing it in the same way that the potato race is played.

The requirements are ten lemons, two vegetable dishes and two tablespoons. The lemons are placed in two parallel rows, five in a row and three feet apart, one of the dishes heading each row. The company forms in two equal lines, one behind each row, the lines being numbered respectively with odd and even numbers. A timekeeper is appointed to keep tally and call time for the contestants, who are allowed just three minutes to do their special "stunt." When all is ready Nos. 1 and 2 take the spoons and start down their respective lines, the object being to see which side owns the most members who can gather up the line of lemons one at a time in a spoon, carry them to the vegetable dish and deposit them without touching the fruit with their hands. All having had a trial, the accounts are balanced, the judge renders his verdict, and a prize is given to the victorious side.

A lemon pie with a good thick meringue affords much fun in its proper distribution as a prize.

The refreshments for the lemon party should all contain lemon in some form. The sandwiches may be chicken, with wafer thin slices of lemon. The salad may be served in lemon cups made from the skins or simply garnished with sliced lemons. The lemon ice or lemon jelly can be served in the lemon skins also, and lemon layer cake or small cakes with lemon icing may accompany the ice or jelly. Of course there will be plenty of lemonade to drink and lemon drops to fill the bonbon dishes. Let each one take home his lemon pig or other animal as a souvenir of the occasion.

Punching Bag For Women.

Throw open the windows and punch a bag. This is the latest beauty advice.

A well known writer on athletics insists that by punching a bag for ten minutes a day for a week a woman can do more to reduce her weight and preserve a good figure than by observing a strict diet for six months.

Bag punching develops the chest, neck and shoulders and reduces the waist. It exercises every muscle, gives thin women curves and makes stout women thin. If a woman has a poor complexion the exercise will give her the tints of peaches and cream if anything will. The object of all exercise is to make the blood circulate rapidly and well and bag punching does that to perfection.

Unlike fencing, bag punching requires no instructor, yet its advocates say it will make a woman just as graceful and as light on her feet as the other exercise. She will learn to poise and balance herself, and this will give her a springy step and an easy and graceful carriage. Unlike fencing, too, no antagonist is required. This is another strong point in favor of bag punching.

These are the rules of the punching contest as laid down by an authority: Suspend the bag on a level with the shoulders and strike straight from the shoulder. This stroke brings into play a greater number of muscles than any other, tends to expand the chest and gives a good poise to the neck.

Ten minutes a day is long enough for the average woman, but twenty minutes will be better if she wants to reduce weight rapidly. Punch the bag twenty-five times with the right arm swing, rest a few moments and then try twenty-five strokes with the left hand.

Strike with the greatest regularity possible. Don't exercise an hour one day and then forget all about it for a week.

To Walk Well.

Don't drag your feet or fling them or lag or stride. Learn to glide into a room gracefully.

It is impossible for a woman to be awkward in her walk if she walks straight and keeps her knees stiff. The act of swinging the feet out gives one a graceful gait.

Walk slowly. Skirts wind around your calves when you walk rapidly, and all semblance of grace is lost. Walk in leisurely manner, as if you were a princess, not a hurried, worried, overworked woman.

Don't swing your shoulders.

Don't swing your arms.

Don't twist yourself in sinuous motions. Don't contort. Don't wiggle.

Hold your chin in. This is the most important thing of all.

Don't walk or look or act like an old person. There are no old persons in these days. Touch the ground first with the balls of your feet, with the heels striking an instant later.

Working with the head bent over is very injurious to the eyes, as it tends to gorge the vessels of the eyes with blood and to produce congestion.

Finger nails that are manicured every week will retain their delicacy and luster much longer than those that are neglected.

Open Publicity

Insures a fair, square and honest deal. It characterises the policy of Dr. Pierce as relates to the composition of his time-proven and most popular medicines. Their ingredients are on each bottle-wrapper, attested under oath and printed in plain English. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the only medicine designed for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments and sold by druggists, the makers of which publish on each bottle-wrapper what the medicine contains.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription contains no alcohol, and no narcotics or other harmful or habit-forming drugs, as will be seen from its published ingredients. It contains only such native, medicinal roots as are most highly recommended by leading medical writers and practitioners of all the several schools of practice, for the cure of woman's delicate and peculiar ailments. It is safe for women to take in any condition of the system, as it assists Nature in restoring the healthful action of all the organs distinctly feminine.

Nature's own cure. In fact, "Favorite Prescription" is Nature's own cure for the many derangements and weaknesses peculiar to women. It is advised for no other diseases.

If you are a weak, tired, nervous, over-worked, broken-down, pain-racked woman, either young, old or middle-aged, suffering from frequent headaches, backaches, dizziness or fainting spells, gnawing or distressed feeling in stomach, perhaps see imaginary specks, or dark spots floating before the eyes, have dragging-down or heavy feeling in lower abdomen, or pelvic region, with, perhaps, pelvic catarrh, or other symptoms of functional or organic affections of the distinctly feminine organs, then you will make no mistake if you resort to the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The most advanced medical science knows no better agents for the cure of all such diseases than are happily and harmoniously combined in this widely-famed "Prescription" of Dr. Pierce.

You can't afford to accept any secret nostrum of unknown composition and of questionable merit as a substitute for this professionally endorsed and time-tested remedy OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, simply that some unprincipled dealer may make a little larger profit. Don't expect it to perform miracles but give it a fair, persevering trial and it is not likely to disappoint you. It won't "dissolve tumors"—no medicine will. It will cure a larger percentage of all curable ailments which especially afflict womankind than any other medicine sold by druggists for that purpose.

As to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery it has a very large range of application, yet it is by no means recommended as a "Cure-All." It possesses marvelous alterative, or blood cleansing, properties and is at the same time a most invigorating tonic, or strength giver. It exerts a specific, cleansing, soothing and healing effect upon all the lining mucous membranes of the system; hence, its great curative value in all catarrhal affections, no matter where located.

In Chronic Nasal Catarrh, it is well to cleanse the passages two or three times a day with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy fluid, while persisting in the use of the "Golden Medical Discovery" for its blood cleansing and specific curative effects upon the diseased mucous membranes. It will cure a very large per cent. of all cases, even after they have reached the ulcerative, or chronic stage, and no matter of how many years' standing they may be. It is equally efficacious in affections of the mucous lining of the larynx, bronchia and respiratory organs in general, thus curing bronchitis, laryngitis and other affections giving rise to obstinate, hang-on-coughs. It is not so good in acute coughs following sudden colds, as in the lingering, chronic coughs. Nor must the "Golden Medical Discovery" be expected to work miracles. It will not cure consumption in its advanced stages—no medicine will do that, but for all obstinate hang-on-coughs due to laryngial or bronchial irritation and kindred affections, of the throat which, if neglected or badly treated, are likely to lead up to consumption, the "Discovery" can be relied upon to produce the best curative results.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is, from its tonic and specific curative control over mucous surfaces, especially efficacious in curing indigestion, dyspepsia, weak stomach and "Liver Complaint," or biliousness. Even ulceration of the stomach and bowels has in thousands of cases been cured by it; also obstinate chronic diarrhea.

In addition to all the foregoing, not the least valuable of the marvelously efficacious properties possessed by the "Discovery" is the unequaled regulating and strengthening effect exerted by it over the heart's action. It has made some wonderful cures of very pronounced valvular and other affections of that organ.

The reason why "Golden Medical Discovery" cures so wide a range of diseases is made plain in a booklet sent free on request mailed to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. If interested, send for it.

The powerful alterative or blood purifying properties possessed by the "Discovery" will naturally suggest its use for the cure of blotches, pimples, eruptions; as eczema, salt-rheum, and other skin affections in all of which it has made remarkable cures; also in scrofulous sores and old, open ulcers, or eating sores. To heal the latter, use Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve as a local application, while taking the "Golden Medical Discovery" to correct the blood and cleanse the system. A box will be mailed to any address on receipt of fifty-four cents in stamps. If your druggist don't have it in stock, address Dr. Pierce, as above.

The Little Red House.

By JEROME SPRAGUE.

Copyrighted, 1907, by Jessie Morgan.

Brady, whizzing along Riverside in his big, automobile, was a lonely man.

Before he had made his money he had lived on a farm, and in his trips back and forth from town there had been the greetings of good neighbors and the welcome of the farm hands, and at home the sociability of the meals at the great table, where maids and men gathered with the family.

There was no sociability in New York. For days he had wandered into the theaters and through the hotels, avoiding instinctively the men who would have cultivated him merely for what they could get out of him, but finding no friends.

At last, in desperation, he had learned to drive an automobile and spent his days in making long trips into the country, hobnobbing with the farmers who leaned over the fence rails to talk to him and leaving them wistfully when they returned to their toil.

Today as he sped down the drive, with its rows of cliffiike buildings, he yearned for some cheery spot where he might eat and drink with a friend. And it was at this moment that his eye was caught by a sign in the window of the little red house.

The little red house was set at the edge of a vacant lot, and it seemed a very shabby neighbor to the stately white apartment house that flanked it on the left. It had a sloping roof, a few vines clung to the porch, and just above the door was the sign that had attracted Brady's notice, and the sign read, "Fresh Cherry Pies."

Brady swept up to the curb and climbed out of his machine. His great form filled the low doorway and shut out the sunlight, so that at first he could not see clearly the figure behind the counter.

"I DON'T WONDER THAT PEOPLE CAME," COMMENTED BRADY.

"I came in to ask about the cherry pies," he said. "Can I eat one here or must I carry it away with me?"

There was a ripple of laughter, and Brady moved to one side and saw that the person in charge was a girl, fresh faced, pretty and trim.

"You can eat it here," she said, taking a pie out of the case. "People usually take them away, but there is a little table and a chair, and I could make you a cup of coffee."

"Could you?" Brady's tone was eager. "I'm awfully hungry, and it is so pleasant here."

She was cutting the pie, but she looked up as he said that. "Oh, do you like it?" she asked. "I hope every one will. I am just beginning business and I want to make a fortune."

Brady, who had made his fortune in oil, was much interested in this more picturesque method.

"Do you sell many?" he asked.

"Twenty yesterday," she confided. "I worked at night to get them ready, but it seemed as if every one wanted cherry pies. The people in the apartment house came, and I have sold out everything today except this one pie."

It was a beautiful pie, with a delicate brown crust overlaid with powdered sugar and all rosy and juicy and delicious within.

"I don't wonder that people came," commented Brady as he sat down at the little table, which she had spread with a spotless cloth.

She was like a child in her delight at his compliment.

"It was the only thing in the world that I knew how to do," she said, "and when I was left alone and lost the little income that my father had left me I decided to bake for a living."

She was sitting opposite him, and he liked the unconsciousness with which she gave him her confidence.

"I lived in the country when I was a little girl, and my mother taught me to cook."

"I'm from the country, too," Brady said.

"I thought so," she said, with a wise nod. "I think that is why I could tell you things. One can't always be sure of city men."

"Don't you hate the city?" Brady asked.

She shook her head. "No," she said. "It would be beautiful if one had friends or any one to care."

"Well, that's what I mean," Brady said. "It's so dead lonesome."

He had finished his pie, and he got up reluctantly. "I'm sorry," he said, "but I guess I'd better go."

She went to the door with him.

"What a beautiful automobile!" she said when she saw it.

"Yes, it's pretty nice," Brady agreed. "But it isn't much fun driving around by myself."

"No, I suppose not," sympathetically.

There was a moment's silence. Then Brady spoke his thoughts boldly.

"Let me drive you out into the country."

She hesitated. "I don't believe I ought," she said.

Brady looked down at her. "Can't you trust me?" he asked.

Her eyes met his steady blue ones. "Yes," she said simply and went to put on her hat.

"You see," she told him as they swept along between the green fields, "if I sell twenty pies a day at 25 cents that will be $5 a day. I ought to clear $100 a month." And she leaned back, with a sigh of content.

Brady, whose income was $100 or more a day, asked with interest, "What are you going to do with all that money?"

"Save it and buy a cottage in the country, with a fireplace and a cat and a dog and a cow."

Brady's soul was stirred by this picture of domesticity, and he asked enviously:

"Will you bake cherry pies?"

"Yes," she planned. "I am going to have a cherry tree and an apple tree. You have never tasted such apple tarts as I can make."

Brady turned in his seat and looked at her. "I am going to taste them," he informed her. "I am going to come and see you in your cottage."

She laughed. "Such air castles!" was her way of settling the question.

But Brady's chin was set with squareness, and there was determination in his tones. "I don't see how I can wait for you to build that cottage. I shall do it myself, and there shall be a fireplace—such a fireplace—with two big chairs on the hearth"—he paused expressively—"and a cat, a comfortable tabby cat, and a nice, confiding dog, and a mild eyed cow, and I am going to invite you to my cottage to make my apple tarts."

She smiled at him without self consciousness. "What dreamers we are!"

"Well, maybe you think it's a dream" —Brady's tone was dogged—"but some day I shall ask you to come."

There was no mistaking what he meant.

"Please don't," she begged.

Brady gave her a whimsical glance.

"Well, I suppose it is too soon to talk about it," he agreed. "But that cottage will need something besides a cow and a dog and a cat for me to be happy. It will need a wife and a woman worth loving—and until today I hadn't seen such a woman."

"You have known me but three hours."

"Three hours or three years! What's the difference when I know I have found the one I want?"

They were back again on the city drive, and the little red house was in sight.

"We don't have to settle anything now," Brady told her quietly. "Of course I couldn't expect you to feel the way I do. But what I want to know is this—may I come again?"

She hesitated; then, as he lifted her out of the car with his strong arms, she smiled up at him.

"Yes," she said, "if you like you may come again."

A Tart Answer.

"I was writing by my study window," writes a clergyman, "and a little child was busying himself by throwing beans at the window. Losing all patience, I rushed out of the house, determined to frighten the boy. It happened that his mother was coming after him at the same moment, and we met by his side.

"I stormed at the child, and then, as the mother seemed excessively stupid, I gave her a piece of my mind. Finally as a grand and overwhelming conclusion to my scolding I said:

"'A little discipline now with your children will save you much pain if not disgrace in the future. Think of that, madam—that is, if you ever do think.'

"'Think, is it?' she replied. 'I think if you'd go back to your bedroom and wipe the ink aff av your nose you'd be prettier even if you didn't make so much av a sensation.'

"It was not a soft answer, but it had the effect of turning away wrath."—London Tit-Bits.

A Needlework Notion.

A woman given to much needlework featherstitches her baby dresses with very coarse white thread (No. 12) instead of using embroidery cotton, as is usually done. The hard twisted glazed thread never rots or sinks into the fabric, as the other does, but keeps its first outline through endless launderings.

Proper Introduction.

A good formula is "Miss Brown, may I present Mr. Jones?" or "Mrs. Van Courtlandt, I should like you to meet Mrs. Austin." Of course the gentleman is always presented to the lady, the young person to the older one, the less distinguished to the honored guest.

HARRIS IS SUED

Former State Treasurer Sued by Receiver of Enterprise National Bank.

WHO CLAIMS $20,000

Alleged That This Amount Was Given in Two Checks and Was a Bribe.

TdE BANK FAILURE RECALLED.

Pittsburg, November 14 h.—The most surprising of the many sensations which have developed since the failure of the Enterprise National bank of Allegh-ny in 1905, occurred today when Thomas Rinaker, receiver of the defunct institution, entered a suit in assumpsit in United States district court against ex-State Treasurer of Pennsylvania Frank G. Harris, claiming $20.000, with interest from October 23rd, 1903.

The petition alleges that Harris as state treasurer selected the Enterprise National bank as a state depository, making aggregate deposits of state money of $20,890,000. It is alleged the Pennsylvania Development company was formed by T. Lee Clark, cashier of the Enterprise bank, who killed himself the morning the government closed the institution; William H. Andrews, territorial delegate to congress from New Mexico; Arthur Kennedy and Francis J. Torrance, two prominent Pittsburgers.

It is stated that Andrews, Clark, Kennedy and Torrence entered into an agreement whereby the Pennsylvania Development company was enabled to borrow large sums from the Enterprise bank. Harris it is alleged, was given two checks of $10,000 each by Clark, October 21st, 1903, drawn upon Merchants' National bank, of Philadelphia, where the Enterprise bank carried a large account, and it is distinctly charged that Harris used the money realized on these checks for his own personal benefit, knowing that the drafts were fraudulently given him and that he was accepting a bribe for his part in permitting the promoters of the Pennsylvania Development company to use the funds of the Enterprise bank and the state.

You can't be well if you have a weak, unhealthy, tired out stomach. Neither can you feel good if by some little irregularity in eating you have caused the stomach to get out of order. These little stomach troubles are signs of indigestion which may and very often does turn into a very bad case of dyspepsia. Don't allow this to go on a single day without doing something to overcome it. Take some good reliable and safe digestant like KODOL For Dyspepsia. KODOL is the best remedy known today for heart burn, bleching and all troubles arising from a disordered digestion. It is pleasant to take and affords relief promptly. Sold by Green's Pharmacy.

In most cases consumption results from a neglected or improperly treated cold. Foley's Honey and Tar cures the most obstinate coughs and prevents serious result. It costs you no more than the unknown preparations and you should insist upon having the genuine in the yellow package. Sold by C. M. Parrish.

How He Grew Young.

One satisfied man returned from a two weeks' holiday. He spent it on a farm owned by an old aunt, and the royal way in which she fed him, to use his own description, formed the chief delight of his holiday.

"You see," he remarked confidentially, "my wife is a graduate of a diet and cooking school of the most up to date sort. She sees that we never have a meal which isn't perfectly balanced as to food values. The things we eat are chosen with reference to that and not with regard to whether we like them especially. Well, I can tell you, old Aunt Laura, with her table just groaning with forbidden, indigestible articles, was a mighty welcome change to me. She never heard of carbohydrates or phosphates or cellulose, and she wouldn't know a proteid if she met one in a bean porridge, where, by the way, I believe they largely congregate. But I tell you her fried chicken and fresh pork and biscuits were the finest things I've had for years. My wife actually turned pale when she saw me eat, and I know she was worried, because we were six miles from a doctor. I was never ill for a minute, though, and those two weeks of old fashioned, unscientific cooking have made me feel like a new man—or, rather, like a boy again."—London M. A. P.

Her Conversion.

When preparing his parishioners for the solemn ordinance of confirmation an old clergyman found among them one old woman so excessively ignorant and stupid that for some weeks prior to the time he was obliged to have her come to his house every day in order to instruct and catechise her. At length he began to hope that his time, patience and zeal had not been entirely bestowed in vain, a few bright flashes of understanding having burst from the old dame's clouded intellect. "Now, my good friend," said the worthy pastor just previous to the commencement of the ceremony, "as this is the last moment in which I shall have an opportunity of conversing with you, let me ask, do you thoroughly understand and believe all the articles of your Christian faith?"

"Aye, yes, sir, thank'ee," replied his venerable pupil, with a simper and dropping one of her best courtesies, "I does indeed now, and, thank God, I heartily renounces them all."

The Clock Struck 1.

It was just two minutes to 1 when John Ludlam entered the house and, unwrapping a paper parcel, said to his wife that he had brought her a present of a clock. It was her birthday, and she had expected a brooch or a ring at least, and so she said tartly, "You liked the look of that clock."

His face flushed. "A nice way to speak about a present!" said he hotly.

"Well, it's the truth. I wouldn't have given a couple of shillings for it," said she in an exasperating tone.

John Ludlam was a quick tempered man. The veins in his temples swelled, and—

Just then the clock struck 1.

What did it signify—that the clock was running all right?

It did not. The ambulance surgeon said a few minutes later that if the clock had struck one inch nearer her temple John Ludlam would have been a widower.—Pearson's Weekly.

Many Color Lines In Cuba.

There are social distinctions in Cuba based upon color. There is not one but several color lines, though these are not eternal, hard, fast and unchangeable, as in the United States. In Cuba social life is run largely by social clubs. There are in almost every town and village negro clubs, two or three grades of mulatto clubs and white clubs. In one and at its functions may appear the husband, excluding the wife; in another, the wife, but not the husband; in a third, their children, but neither the father nor mother. To the world this will appear incredible, almost incomprehensible. Here it is convention, fixed, settled, accepted and operative. These distinctions, however, run but for a lifetime. —Army and Navy Life.

Too Much For Him.

"Andrew," said a devoted wife to her husband, "I want a hundred."

"A hundred what?" exclaimed the husband.

"Dollars," she replied calmly.

"What for?"

"Oh, a whole lot of things."

"Um-um," he hesitated. "I guess I shall have to check your extravagance, my dear."

"Do," she smiled, "and make it payable to my order, please."

He collapsed then and there.—Brooklyn Citizen.

The Persian Language.

Persian is said to be not a very difficult language. The modern Persian is very much like the English in its sensible rejection of the inflections that burden so many of the world's tongues. There is no difference of termination to mark the gender either in nouns or adjectives, and all inanimate things are neuter. In other ways the Persian language conforms to the English.

"Is he so pessimistic?"

C. T. BARNEY KILLS HIMSELF

Tragic End of Life of Deposed President of Knickerbocker Trust Co.

LIVES A FEW MINUTES

Told the Physician Who Was Called That it Was an Accident.

HIS LOSS OF FORTUNE AFFECTED HIM

New York, November 15th.—Charles Tracy Barney, the deposed president of the Knickerbocker Trust company and until recently a power in the financial world, shot and killed himself Thursday in his home in New York. His loans with the bank, it is said, are amply secured and when he was forced from its presidency he was, to all intents and purposes eliminated as a factor in banking circles What ill effects his unexpected taking off might have had on the financial situation generally had long since been discounted. In distress of mind over the dissipation of his private fortune and the loss of his high standing among business associates, intimate acquaintances find the hidden drift that broke his health and reason.

Deafness Cannot be Cur

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.
